Bidder Seeks Way To Win

By OSWALD JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
In this hand from "All Fifty-two Cards" by Marshall Miles, I have shown the East and West cards, but you should plan your play without looking at the East and West hands.

Don't bother to criticize the bidding. The slam contract is most optimistic and both North and South have overbid, but we are concerned only with the problem of how to make the contract. Analysis of the lead and a review of the bidding don't help. You have to find some place to park three little hearts and the only place is dummy's spade suit.

Do you see any combination of cards that will let you make your slam? If you do you are a really fine player. If you don't then look at the East and West hands because they have been set up for that one combination.

You lead a spade and finesse dummy's jack. If it loses you will be down three, but you were down two anyway. The finesse works.

Now you trump a low spade and draw trumps, stopping in dummy. The ace of spades is played and West's king drops. Now dummy's last two spades are good and you can discard your three losing hearts. Eventually you lose a diamond, but your slam has come home.

California Ghost Town Resurrected

CALICO, Calif. (UPI) — The mountains . . . a scorching sun . . . and the relentless wind remain. Only the people changed. They use to come in wagons or on foot. Now they arrive in air conditioned cars.

Calico was born in the early 1880s when three prospectors discovered one of the richest veins of silver ore in history. Within a few months more than 4,000 persons took up residence in tents, lean-tos, and holes they picked out of the mountains.

Calico died 16 years later and became a ghost town. Today the population is about 30.

The town, nestled in the foothills of the Calico Range, was resurrected by Walter Knott of Knott's Berry Farm. He spent more than $700,000 restoring the decayed mining mecca of the past located 150 miles east of Los Angeles.

The few residents live off the jingling pockets of tourists who take a step into the past and relive the excitement of the Old West.

It can be recaptured briefly. A stroll down the boardwalk streets, past Lil's Saloon, Hank's Hotel, Lane's General Store and The Calico Print, first published in 1882. Mrs. Lucy B. Lane, a Calico resident in its heyday, is still alive and has returned. She sits outside her store and welcomes the tourists as she used to greet the gun laden miners in her youth.

Calico had fires, shootings and bordellos. But there was a school and a church too. Also a Boot Hill. For 16 years Calico lived gayly, boldly and bawdily. More than $95 million in silver poured from her mountains in those boisterous years — $10 million from the Silver King Mine alone.

Veins of ore four feet wide were uncovered. Some ore assayed at 200 to 400 ounces per ton. Today the tourists can take a ride through an old mine shaft, ride a small railroad cart down the mountain or pay 25 cents to view freshly dusted antiques.

When the price of silver dropped in 1896 the hardy miners left in search of new riches and so did the rest.

Some stayed behind in Boot Hill which overlooks the pock-marked hills. But adventurers in the 1880s had a sense of humor even about dying.

"Beneath this stone, a lump of clay, lies Nora Young, who on the 21st of May, began to hold her tongue," reads one epitaph about the town gossip. "This is one on me," says the marker for saloon keeper Joe Kelly.

Life ended abruptly for some. Frontier law took care of Blackie Scroggins hanged May 1, 1882, for claim jumping. The old wooden stone for Wes Wescott says, "Hung in his youth, 'Twas a sad mistake when we found the truth."

For many there only are unmarked heaps of stone.

Calico's marker is the whistling wind, barren mountains and the scorching sun. Thousands of mourners arrive every year in air conditioned cars to pay their respects as if a lost friend were buried in the Calico Range.

Leaders Issue Final Plans For Civil Rights March On Nation's Capital

NEW YORK (UPI) — Leaders of the Aug. 28 march on Washington issued final plans Tuesday for the giant civil rights demonstration and demanded desegregation of all schools this year.

In a 12-page organizing manual, the leaders charged that "the southern Democrats came to power by disenfranchising the Negro. They know that semi-slavery for one means semi-slavery for all."

"Our bodies, numbering over 100,000, will bear witness — will serve historic notice — that jobs and freedom are needed now," the manual said.

The leaders expect more than 100,000 persons to attend the rally.

Spells Out Demands
The booklet spelled out for the first time detailed demands of the marchers. The demands included:

—Withholding federal funds from all programs in which discrimination exists.

—Desegregating all school districts in 1963.

—Reducing congressional representation of states where citizens are disenfranchised.

—Issuing a new executive order banning discrimination in all housing supported by federal funds.

—Undertaking a massive federal program to train and place all unemployed workers — Negro and white — in meaningful and dignified jobs.

—Instituting a national minimum wage act that will give all Americans a decent standard of living. The leaders said government surveys show that anything less than $2 an hour fails to do this.

"Our demonstration — the largest and most significant in the history of Washington — will bear eloquent witness that we do not come to beg or plead for rights denied for centuries. Our massive march . . . will speak out to Congress and the nation with a single voice — for jobs and freedom now," the leaders said.

Names Chief Marshal
A. Philip Randolph, head of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and chairman of the march, said Tuesday William H. Johnson Jr., a Negro New York City policeman, would be the chief marshal. Johnson is president of The Guardian, a Negro fraternal organization of city policemen.

There will be 2,000 marshals to keep order. The official schedule calls for demonstrators to assemble at the Washington Monument by 10 a.m., stage twin parades to the Lincoln Memorial at noon and to begin the rally there at 2 p.m.

The manual stressed that the demonstration was to be a one-day affair and that all persons were to leave the capital as soon as possible. A nationwide railroad strike is scheduled eight hours after the end of the march.
