California Policy Could Hinder International Highway Plan

A policy of the California state legislature may delay—or perhaps endanger—the possibility that U.S. Highway 97 will be designated as the Pan American Highway, linking three nations and nine states and provinces between Mexico City and Fairbanks, Alaska.

The present U.S. 97 extends from Fairbanks to Weed, Calif. But the Okanogan Cariboo Trail Association of Yakima, Wash., has proposed to the Pan American Highway Congress that several highways linking Mexico City from eastern California and western Nevada and Arizona be renumbered U.S. 97 and thus become part of the present highway bearing the same number.

The association then proposes that the Pan Am Congress designate U.S. 97, which would then link Fairbanks to Mexico City, as the official Pan American Highway.

The congress is considering various other routes for the distinction of becoming the main traffic artery between Mexico, the United States and Canada.

Opinions of officials familiar with the temper of the congress have given the route through Klamath Falls at least as much chance as any other thoroughfare of being designated as the international highway.

However, one fact may put a crimp in those chances.

Regulations of the congress requires that before U.S. 97 (or any other highway) could be extended south to Mexico City the several states to be affected by the highway redesignations would have to agree to those changes being made.

That's the catch.

Nevada and Arizona have agreed that certain highways passing through those states should serve as part of the proposed Pan American Highway and be redesignated as U.S. 97, as has Mexico.

But California, where the highway (now designated 395) would cross the northeastern part of the state, has indicated it would withhold its decision for the next several years until a complexity of other highway numbering problems have been solved. The difficulties developed in recent years due to the construction of many new highways in the state.

George Callison told the Herald and News Friday that the action of the California legislature was foreseen some time ago by Senator Randolph Collier of California.

In a conversation with Callison, the senator remarked that the legislature had agreed to defer any action relating to the renumbering of California highways for the next several years.

Meanwhile, the Okanogan Cariboo Trail Association is hopefully continuing its promotion of the proposed route, which will be a major topic on the association's agenda when it conducts its annual convention in Reno, Oct. 6 through 7. The group will meet briefly in Klamath Falls, Oct. 5, before proceeding to the convention.

The association has been promoting U.S. 97 since a route for the Pan American Highway came under study about 15 years ago and takes credit for two other projects which have since been completed along the route.

Group Set To Attend 4-H Confab

TULELAKE — Mrs. Stan Buckingham, Tulelake, and Modoc County Farm Adviser Bob Savage, with a group of 4-H Club members, will attend the biggest state event on the 4-H calendar, the statewide 4-H leadership conference. The meeting on the Davis campus of the University of California, Aug. 23-30, is expected to attract some 1,400 boys and girls.

A staff of more than 100 persons from the university is preparing for the leadership event under the chairmanship of Harry Miller, 4-H Club specialist. Theme of the conference will be "Leadership Exploration by 4-H Citizens in Action."

There will be 20 Modoc County 4-H delegates.

Selected to receive the Bank of America's junior leader Merit Awards for Modoc County are Marcia Chambers, Carol Jackson and Sandra Spomer of Tulelake, and Linda Duncan of Lookout. This award pays half of the conference fee and provides special recognition for three junior leaders at the state conference.

Janet Buckingham of Tulelake and Carolyn Porter of Alturas will take part in the dress review. They were local winners last spring. The State 4-H Dress Review winner will be selected from the 54 contestants as part of the conference activities.

Crash Kills Oregon Trio

HAWTHORNE, Nev. (UPI) — Three Oregon residents were killed Thursday when the car in which they were riding left U.S. Highway 95 north of here.

The Nevada highway patrol identified the victims as Mrs. Joe Kilgore, 39; her son, David, 7, and daughter, Kate, 5, all of Unionville, a Polk County community about 15 miles north of Salem.

Lewis Ritz, 19, driver of the car and son of the woman, was hurt and was two other children, aged 3 and 9.

Investigating officers said the victims were en route to Arizona when the car left the road seven miles south of Schurz, a community on the Walker Lake Indian Reservation.

Officers were investigating to determine circumstances of the accident.
