

Former Special Adviser To President Kennedy Draws 30-Day Prison Sentence

NEW YORK (UPI)—James M. Landis, former dean of the Harvard Law School and special adviser to President Kennedy, was sentenced Friday in federal court to 30 days in prison for "unlawfully, wilfully and knowingly" failing to file and pay income taxes on time.

Landis, 63, was visibly shaken as Judge Sylvester J. Ryan imposed sentence and commiserated with the famed attorney's "weakness." He sat at the defense table in a prayerful attitude, his body trembling and his hands, clasped before his face, opening and closing spasmodically.

Landis' attorney, William Warren, said Landis had come to court from a neurological institution where he had voluntarily confined himself for the past several days. The judge said Landis must have medical attention and hospitalization and spoke of Landis' "long record" of psychiatric treatment.

"But I can't let you go without the imposition of some small sentence," the judge said. "I must give you some time—not for punishment but to give you an opportunity for reflection."

Landis pleaded guilty Aug. 2 to each count and a total of $30,000 in fines.

Landis was charged with not having filed income tax returns of income totalling $360,927. He could have received a maximum sentence of one year in prison on each count and a total of $30,000 in fines.

Agency Makes Study Grants

Two grants totaling $41,400 have been awarded by the U.S. Housing and Home Finance Agency to the University of Oregon Bureau of Municipal Research for municipal planning in Coos Bay, North Bend, Klamath Falls, and other areas.

One grant of $25,200, which includes $8,000 from the local communities, will be used for planning work in the Coos Bay and central Coos County groups of adjacent communities and in the cities of Bandon and Klamath Falls.

The other grant, of $16,200, which includes $5,200 in local funds, is for a special study in North Bend of the economic prospects for a water front industrial development.
