

U.S. Army Ranger gives Vietnamese trainees pointers in use of bayonet in intensive program to counter Viet Cong guerrillas.

Moments before this photograph, a Communist terror bomb exploded at helicopter exhibit in Saigon, killing seven people.

Helmeted soldier, armed with a rifle, stands at a main intersection of Saigon as martial law reigns in the unhappy land.

Like France before it, America has found itself drawn deeper and deeper into the jungles of Viet Nam. U.S. military advice and $1 million a day in equipment and supplies have seriously hurt but failed to stop the Communist guerrillas, who are armed and directed by North Viet Nam.

Besides the guerrillas, President Ngo Dinh Diem, hardly renowned as a champion of Western-style civil rights, has had to contend with popular resistance to his rule, military coups and outright Communist terrorism.

Now, threatening to succeed in toppling the government where the Communists have failed, the nation's Buddhists, who make up the overwhelming majority of the population, are reacting against what they charge is unjust repression of their religion.

Spectacular suicides by Buddhists, sit-down strikes and student riots have aroused the sympathy of the world. The embattled Diem regime, apparently having won the first rounds of this new crisis, is currently forced to maintain nationwide martial law.

The long war of the Vietnamese for freedom goes on.

Christine Keeler Jailed On Charges Of Perjury

LONDON (UPI) — Playgirl Christine Keeler, reduced from a starring role in Britain's "scandal of the century" to a prisoner in a London magistrate's court, was formally charged today with perjury and conspiracy to obstruct justice.

She and three alleged fellow-conspirators were released on bail following a 10-minute hearing on the charges in Marlborough Street court. They were ordered to appear in court again Sept. 15.

All four had spent the night in jail — a new experience for Miss Keeler, the 21-year-old red-haired beauty whose affections brought the downfall of War Minister John Profumo three months ago and set off a scandal that almost toppled the government of Prime Minister Harold Macmillan.

Miss Keeler was arrested at her swank London apartment Thursday night.

Detectives also arrested Christine's friend, Paula Hamilton-Marshall, 21, and Miss Hamilton-Marshall's maid, Mrs. Olive Brooker, on the same charges.

Randolf Fenton, a Jamaican, was arrested for conspiracy.

The four had played a part in the arrest, conviction and three-year prison sentence of Jamaican jazz singer Aloysius (Lucky) Gordon on charges of beating and kicking the 22-year-old Miss Keeler.

Gordon was sentenced June 7 but the Court of Criminal Appeals quashed the sentence July 30 because of secret new evidence in the case.

Bauer To Head Life Guard Club

MALIN — Sixty persons attended the Malin Life Guard Club's annual family swim party on Aug. 24.

New officers elected for the coming year include Bob Bauer, president; Shirley Zeiders, vice president; and Peggy Long, secretary. In other business, the club voted to sponsor a swim team next season.

Farewell gifts were presented to Nancy Kolkow and Stanley Petrasek as they will not be employed at the Malin swimming pool next year.

Severed Arm Replaced By Doctors

BOSTON (UPI) — Tests were being made today to determine whether an operation that re-joined the severed right arm of a father of seven was successful.

Lennart Turnquist, 44, of Reading, who was found battered and barely conscious Thursday on railroad tracks in suburban Wakefield, was in satisfactory condition at Massachusetts General Hospital. His name was not on the danger list.

Officials said the arm, completely severed near the shoulder, was re-joined, and the three major nerves were reconnected during a 10-hour and 40-minute operation by a 13-member surgical team.

They said it could not be determined immediately whether the operation was a success.

Surgeons hoped to repeat their success of last year when they performed a similar operation. In May, 1962, during an operation that now is a part of medical history, Massachusetts General Hospital surgeons re-joined the right arm of 12-year-old Everett Knowles of Somerville after the arm was severed when the boy fell from a train.

The Knowles boy is slowly regaining use of his arm with daily exercise and continued treatment.

However, several other attempts to rejoin severed limbs at Massachusetts General have not been successful.

Wakefield police dragged Turnquist from the path of an approaching train Thursday after the crew of another train going in the opposite direction reported what looked like a dead man on the tracks.

Sgt. John Mahoney and Patrolman Arthur Bragg found Turnquist lying on the Boston & Maine

Railroad tracks near Route 123 in Wakefield shortly after they received the report.

Mahoney said Turnquist was lying on his back across the southbound tracks. His severed right arm was a short distance away on the outside of the tracks. Turnquist also suffered a deep cut on his head. One of his shoes was hurled several feet down the track.

Bragg and Mahoney placed Turnquist on a stretcher and carried him off the tracks just as a Boston-bound train came into view. Mahoney also placed the severed arm in a piece of newspaper.

A waiting ambulance took both Turnquist and the arm to the Melrose-Wakefield Hospital. There, Dr. Harry Schwartz of Wakefield removed the torn sleeve from the detached arm and packed the limb in a bucket of ice.

Turnquist then was transferred to the Boston hospital.
