Father, Three Children Survive Five-Day Ordeal

FORT BRIDGER, Wyo. (UPI) — David Brophy, 28, and his three small children were resting Tuesday with no apparent ill effects from a five-day ordeal on a mountain slope in northern Utah. Brophy was flying a single-engine plane from Hastings, Neb., to his home in Silverdale, Wash., a week ago today when he ran into bad weather and crashed in the rugged Uinta Mountains. He and the children escaped serious injury but spent five days without food before being rescued Sunday. "We were starved," his son, Donald, 7, said as he polished off a hearty meal at the Eastman Hotel in Fort Bridger, a tiny town in Wyoming's southwest corner. His sister, Donna, 5, and brother, Michael, 4, didn't talk. They just ate. Brophy, an unemployed aircraft mechanic, is divorced. He and the children were returning from a trip to Nebraska where they visited his parents. "I hit a downdraft at 11,000 feet and was unable to come out of it," he explained. He stalled the plane into some trees at the 9,000-foot level near Beaver Reservoir and Burnt Fork, Utah, close to the Wyoming line. Brophy bruised a leg in the crash and was unable to walk very far. He managed to get water for the children. The only food they had was some cookies, candy and apples their grandmother gave them in Hastings before the trip. Sunday morning Brophy finally mustered the strength to walk nearly three miles to a logging road, where he erected a barricade and put a sign on it telling of his plight.

'Visit' Lands Man In Jail

A man who police say tried to break into his estranged wife's home was charged with disorderly conduct and treated for a badly lacerated arm Monday evening. Officers said the man, Vern A. Ericks, cut his arm when he punched his fist through a window at the home of his wife, Mrs. Evelyn Ericks. Mrs. Ericks said he came to her house at 1802 1/2 Worden Street Monday afternoon and demanded to see their children. When she told him they were not home, she said, he tore down a screen door, then punched through the window and finally through another screen at her before leaving. The woman called police. Ericks was spotted four hours later by an officer on routine patrol, sitting in a boat in the Link River near Fremont Bridge. The policeman took him from the boat and to the hospital before booking him at city jail.

Measles Top Disease List

Five cases of communicable diseases were reported in Klamath County during the week ending Aug. 31, compared with the counties of Jackson, 21; Lake, 10; and Deschutes, 1, according to information from the Oregon State Board of Health. Of the 37 diseases reported in the four counties during that period, German measles had the greatest incidence with 12, followed by whooping cough, 9; influenza, 8; and pneumonia and measles with 4 each. All of Klamath County's five cases of communicable disease were diagnosed as measles. The breakdown of the other three counties follows: Deschutes—measles, 1; Jackson—pneumonia, 4, measles, 3, German measles, 5, and whooping cough, 9; Lake—influenza, 8, and German measles, 2.

Figures for the state during the same period revealed that influenza led all other cases reported with 109. Next were measles, whooping cough and syphilis, each with 21, followed by pneumonia with 13.
