

Lakeview School Plans Adult Education Slate

LAKEVIEW—The first fall classes of the Lakeview High School Adult Education Program are now being organized, according to Bob Elden, adult director.

Three classes in home economics are being planned for this session. These are Bishop Sewing I, to start Tuesday, Sept. 24; Bishop II, to start Thursday, Sept. 26; and Bishop III (tailoring) to start Wednesday, Sept. 25. All classes will meet for three hours, beginning at 7 p.m. in the home economics room of the Lakeview Junior High School building.

The fee for the 10-week course is $8. Persons are reminded that in order to take either Bishop II or III, the course preceding them in the sequence is required. Those interested should contact Mary Abramson, instructor, at Whitehall 7-7305, or the adult director. Registration as soon as possible is urged.

Anyone interested in vocational courses in agriculture should contact Elden at 7-2335 or 7-5212. Areas of study include veterinary medicine, farm law, range and pasture management, soils and fertilizers, and are of acetylene welding. If sufficient interest is shown in any of the above subjects, an effort will be made to secure an instructor and offer the course.

LAKEVIEW—Virtual assurance that something would be done in the near future to keep the Mautz Nursing Home in operation at Lakeview was made by C. Walter Stickney, state fire marshal, at a public hearing held in the Memorial Hall here Friday morning, Sept. 13.

Approximately 135 persons turned out as representatives of various local organizations or individuals who were interested in the welfare of the home.

The Mautz home is operating now under what is essentially a temporary permit because of orders from the fire marshal's office to make certain changes relative to fire safety. The cost of these changes was found prohibitive by Mr. and Mrs. Wibur Mautz, who have already invested considerable capital in the home to bring it up to its present standards.

The order to close from the State Board of Health was to be effective July 1. A storm of protest issued from local residents, and a move was spearheaded by County Judge C. W. Ogle to contact the governor's office and set a hearing on the matter.

Since that time Stickney was appointed to his position by Governor Mark Hatfield, and he met here in August with the county welfare board to set the hearing date.

He also visited the home, although he did not officially take office until Sept. 3.

Judge Ogle and Stickney presided over the Friday meeting and local speakers included Mrs. Anne Sprague, county school superintendent; Dr. Paul Kliever, county health officer; Dr. Joycelin Robertson; Leslie Shaw, Lake County Examiner; Jack Pendleton, chamber of commerce; Jim Howard, Lions Club; Mrs. Lora Conn, long-time member of the county welfare board; Mrs. Coral Hill, county welfare board; Ernest McKinney and B. K. Snyder.

Also speaking were county commissioners Jewel Corum and Jim Snider; T. R. Conn, local attorney, representing Mr. and Mrs. Mautz, and Jim Mawhrtier, local welfare officer.

Florence Hansen represented the division of medical care, State Public Welfare Commission; Loren Hicks, governor's office; Eldon Weekly, chief deputy for the office of the state fire marshal, and Nelson Ammons, administrative assistant, chronic diseases and licensing of care facilities section of the State Board of Health.

Feeling that the rating of patients had a considerable effect on the operation of the home, Ogle called on the State Welfare Commission to explain this rating.

It was the general conclusion locally that the directive ordering the closing of the home stemmed from rules and regulations rather than established laws and consequently could be changed. Stickney advised that the matter would be taken under immediate advisement and that he felt something could be worked out for the nursing home.

THE DOCTOR SAYS Should Doctor Tell Patient 'How Long'

By W. G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
Do you really want to know? If you had only six months to live, would you want your doctor to tell you so? This poses a difficult problem for both you and your doctor.

But, just as none of us can know the day and the hour of our death, neither can your doctor give a clear-cut answer to the question to how long you are likely to live with a serious illness.

The maxim, "Where there is life there is hope," can just as truthfully be reversed. Where there is hope there is life.

Doctors now pretty generally believe that, when a person's condition is apparently hopeless, he should be advised against financial ruin by, for example, enlarging his business.

A doctor may with the utmost sincerity tell a man that he (the doctor) will advise him when he is strong enough to carry out such a project, even though he feels sure that that time will never come. In that way he does not destroy hope.

There is all the difference in the world between the spirit, the day-to-day will to live, in a dying man who has been told that his case is hopeless and one who believes there is a one in 1,000 chance that tomorrow will be better.

A doctor does great harm when he callously, even though unintentionally, gives the impression that he has given up. As a result, a patient may in desperation commit suicide or may frantically seek help from a quack whose only interest is to get as much of the patient's money as he can before death closes in.

On the other hand, as we go among the sick we have to come to recognize that when the chips are down most persons can face up to anything, even death, if they have faith in those who care for them and do not feel abandoned.

The question is often asked of us, "Do I have cancer?" If the answer is "no," the only problem is to get a certain type of neurotic patient to believe it. Such persons are relatively rare. Most people will react to the good news with genuine relief. If the answer is "yes," the victim should certainly be told. How else can his doctor justify urging the radical operation that may save the patient's life?

If the operation reveals a condition that has progressed beyond the power to surgery to cure, or if later there is a recurrence, neither doctor nor patient should give up hope.

There is always the possibility of a breakthrough in the form of a new cure. Furthermore, rarely and for reasons not well understood as yet, a person with a seemingly hopeless disease has a spontaneous remission and goes on to live many more years.

Even if there is no cure and no remission, his doctor can do much to make the dying patient's last days more comfortable and to keep alive the will to live even though it be for but a short time.
