

Portugal Claims UN Interference Not Justified

By PHIL NEWSOM

LISBON, Portugal — In the panic which followed the butchery of European families in northern Angola during the "Night of the Long Knives" March 15-16, 1961, many white settlers decided to return home.

JFK's Reply Called 'Wishy-Washy'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Jack Westland, R-Wash., has described as "wishy-washy" President Kennedy's reply to 105 congressmen who had asked for U.S.-Canadian talks on lumber imports from Canada.

largest and richest overseas province in Africa. Furthermore, these officials say, terrorism which once extended to 10 per cent of the territory has now been reduced to two per cent.

Nation Is Bitter

Portuguese bitterness over what it regards as United Nations interference in its internal affairs centers on three main points. —Demands for Angolan independence do not come from within the province, but rather are pressed from the outside. At most, the Portuguese say, the movement receives support only from a small segment of tribesmen in the north who are related to others across the river in the Congo. The revolt could be suppressed instantly, they say, if it were not for the "privileged sanctuary" provided by the Congo republic to terrorists who cross back and forth.

—The United Nations stand favoring self-determination for Angola violates the U. N. Charter which specifically forbids U. N. interference in a nation's internal affairs. Carried to a logical extreme, according to the Portuguese, the U. N. eventually could interfere in the smallest affairs of any nation.

Source of Weapons

The Portuguese contend that some weapons captured in the fighting came from Czechoslovakia and Italy and others from Irish forces formerly stationed with the U. N. in the Congo. It is a further source of irritation to the Portuguese to suggest that theirs is a colonial economy dependent on overseas possessions.
