

Youth Admits Killing Mother, Brother

PORTLAND, Maine (UPI)—An AWOL sailor who replied "hell, no" when asked if he felt remorse for killing his mother and younger brother and critically wounding his father was extradited to Massachusetts today to face prosecution for murder.

Crew-cut Stanley N. Garfield, 28, of Framingham, Mass., waived extradition in municipal court a few hours after he was seized at a police roadblock in South Portland.

Garfield, dressed in tight-fitting, dirty white trousers and open-neck blue shirt, spoke out in a loud clear voice during the seven-minute appearance before Judge Millard E. Emmanouel.

Asked by the judge whether he would waive extradition, Garfield said "That's what I wish to do. I talked this over with the Maine state police." He was arraigned on a fugitive from justice charge.

The tanned, slender-fingered teen-ager chatted willingly with newsmen as he stood guarded but unmanacled in the courtroom.

When a newsman asked him why he strangled his mother, Garfield answered, "That's not a sensible question. I don't know. Perhaps something snapped."

To a question as to whether he was sorry for the killings, he snapped, "Hell, no. I don't feel regretful. There's no reason to regret it."

He said he did not know why he went AWOL from the Navy. He said he considered himself a "religious" person.

Police said Garfield readily confessed he strangled his mother, Mrs. Ruth T. Garfield, 43, and his brother John, 9, and that he shot and wounded his father, Robert T. Garfield, 43.

Maine police said the youth described the violence as "something that has been coming to a boil for a long time." A family dispute apparently had been fomented by his marriage to a teen-age sweetheart.

Slayings Follow Argument

The youth told police he strangled his mother during an argument.

Death Takes Cartoonist In England

LONDON (UPI) — Sir David Low, the cartoonist who created the world-famous symbol of Britain's "Colonel Blimp," died Thursday night. He was 72.

He had been ill for some time. Low, whose cartoons won him a knighthood last year, ended his career with the Guardian of Manchester. But he spent 23 years, from 1927 to 1950, with the London Evening Standard, owned by Lord Beaverbrook.

Beaverbrook gave him complete independence, even to the point of allowing Low to draw a cartoon showing "The Beaver" himself as a witch on a broomstick, spreading a mulch of "news for simple minds" through the newspapers.

Beaverbrook supported the Conservative party, but Low fired barbs at all targets and made "Colonel Blimp" a symbol of all he derided in British conservatism, military-mindedness, imperialism and insularity.

A Conservative once asked Beaverbrook why he did not fire Low.

"I have often," the Beaver answered, "but he won't go."

In 1950 Low, often dubbed a "radical puck with a pen," moved to the more politically congenial atmosphere of the London Daily Herald, a Labor party newspaper. He left shortly after for the Guardian, which supports the Liberal party.

Delay Cited In Probate Of Estates

PORTLAND (UPI) — Chief Justice William M. McAllister of the Oregon Supreme Court complained Thursday of what he called "shocking delay" in probate of estates in Oregon.

McAllister spoke at the opening session of the 28th annual Oregon State Bar convention.

He said reports by county clerks show that many cases of delay in probate cases are inexcusable. However, he added that judges are making an effort to eliminate the delays and urged attorneys to cooperate.

He said statistics show criminal cases generally are disposed of quickly and the median civil case in an Oregon court is not more than 12 months old.

Two Oregon newspapermen received Oregon State Bar press awards at a luncheon meeting.

Robert W. Chandler, editor of the Bend Bulletin, was cited for the best editorial on legal matters in the past year.

Chandler's editorial explained the death sentence given Jeannette June Freeman after a life sentence had been handed out to Mrs. Gertrude Jackson, mother of two children the woman had slain in Central Oregon.

William Sanderson, a reporter for the Portland Oregonian, won the award for the best news story, a series on the public defender system.

2-Man Presidential Team Will Try To Restore Peace In Birmingham

By United Press International

A two-man presidential team will attempt to restore racial peace in troubled Birmingham, Ala.

The team, former Army Secretary Kenneth Royall and ex-West Point football coach Earl (Red) Blaik, was appointed Thursday by President Kennedy as his personal representative to Birmingham.

Kennedy later met with seven Negro leaders and refused their demand that federal troops be sent to the Alabama city.

Negro leader Martin Luther King Jr., said he assured the President of his group's desire to work with Royall and Blaik.

Birmingham Mayor Albert Boutwell said his city welcomes the team. Kennedy agreed to meet with the group of white Birmingham leaders at the White House Monday to hear their side of the issue.

Birmingham remained uneasy quiet and Alabama state officials announced that 500 National Guardsmen called to standby duty following the church bombing that killed four Negro children last Sunday have been released.

Elsewhere in the nation:

Petersburg, Va. — With heads bowed about 700 Negroes, most of them wearing black armbands, marched through downtown Petersburg Thursday in protest of racial violence in Birmingham.

Montgomery, Ala. — A federal judge has ordered written briefs to be submitted by Sept. 27 on a petition by a Negro to gain entrance to the Auburn University graduate school.

Jackson, Miss. — The state fair will be open to white persons only this year. In previous years, the fair has run a week for whites and part of the following week for Negroes. But integrationist groups boycotted the fair in 1961 and 1962 as a protest to the segregation and the fair lost money on its Negro run during the boycott.

Norfolk, Va. — About 2,400 Negro high school youths deserted classrooms Thursday for about three hours to march in protest of overcrowded conditions. There were no incidents.

Nashville, Tenn. — Federal District Judge William E. Miller has ordered the admission of 12 Negroes to three desegregated Wilson County schools.

Concord, N.C. — Mayor J.G. McCachern has dissolved this city's bi-racial committee because of repeated Negro demonstrations.

Syracuse, N.Y. — Twenty-three persons—including two Syracuse University professors — were arrested Thursday after a new demonstration protesting alleged racial discrimination in the city's urban renewal project.

Race Tracks Deny Charge

PORTLAND (UPI) — Managers of three race tracks in the Portland area denied today that welfare checks had been cashed there.

They were answering A. W. Gustafson, a Gresham attorney, who said he had reasons to believe welfare recipients had cash state checks at local tracks. He indicated he may seek a writ of mandamus from the State Supreme Court ordering check records opened for inspection.
