Organizations Warned Of Anti-Gambling Drive

District Attorney Dale Crabtree launched a new all-out anti-gambling campaign directed even at lodges, churches, clubs and schools.

In a letter sent by the district attorney to heads of various organizations in the county, Crabtree informed them that lodges, churches, clubs or schools are not exempt from the state's gambling laws and will be prosecuted if they engage in gambling of any kind.

Crabtree indicated that any such violations will be treated in the same manner as operators of commercial gambling enterprises and prosecuted accordingly.

The letter states in part that organizations which have been "in the practice of raising funds by lotteries or other forms of gambling may need to review their practices if they wish to avoid the risk of prosecution."

Crabtree added there were rumors that the bingo game, the cake-walk, and the raffle were being operated in the county and he charged that his office would "prosecute gambling wherever and whenever it may be found."

As an explanation for the crackdown, the letter explained, "It may seem that some of these projects are harmless and for a good cause. But let us consider that it is in violation of the law."

"Can our community-building organizations on the one hand, attempt to build good citizens of our youth and, on the other hand, give the example of violating the law?" he said further.

Crabtree reminded potential violators of the law that following an arrest in a gambling or lottery case, police officers confiscate all money, prizes and equipment being used in the game, in addition to arresting all participants.

The letter noted that in the past year the district attorney's office has advised all commercial establishments where gambling had been reported that "we in our office will 'make' and prosecute every instance of violations of the gambling which we possibly can."

Despite the warning, two Main Street businesses have been raided and numerous arrests have been made in connection with violations of the gambling laws, Crabtree said.

New Bridge Will Open This Week

The new $861,000 bridge spanning Link River at Main Street and Conger Avenue will be open to traffic for the first time this Thursday or Friday, James J. Gix, resident bridge engineer, told the Herald and News Wednesday.

Meanwhile, a portion of Conger Avenue will be closed while construction workers pave a 300-foot section of the street near the bridge.

Although the bridge will be opened to vehicular traffic, the southbound off ramp leading from the structure into Klamath Falls is still under construction and will not be ready for use until sometime next month, Gix said.

Traffic approaching from Bend may enter Klamath Falls by crossing the Link River Bridge, turning right near Riverside Drive, and then continuing north along the present highway.

Vehicles northbound to Klamath Falls from Weed or Ashland do not pass over the bridge; instead they will flow along the present road into the city.

The contract for the construction project was awarded to the Lillebo Construction Company of Roseburg last November and was slated for completion next April.

The bridge represents the last link in the construction of the Westside bypass which includes an underpass near the OTI site and the overpass spanning Nevada Street. With the completion of both ends of the bypass and the signing of the Nevada Avenue structure, completed at a cost of some $9.316, the State Highway Commission will have expended in excess of $3 million on the construction work.

REBEL LEADERS — In an early morning coup today, military leaders in the Dominican Republic arrested President Juan Bosch and seized control of the government of the Caribbean island nation. U.S. Embassy Reports Calm In Santo Domingo

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U. S. Officials in Washington said today they have received reports that Dominican President Juan Bosch and members of his cabinet were being deported from Santo Domingo.

The State Department said it was in touch with the U. S. embassy in Santo Domingo on the military coup and that it had confirmed the arrest of Bosch.

The embassy also reported that conditions in the city were outwardly calm.

U. S. foreign policy officials were closeted in meetings to decide how to deal with the situation.

The coup was regarded as a blow to U. S. policy interests in Latin America, which has been aimed at encouraging and fostering democratic governments.

Until 1961 the Dominican Republic was ruled for 30 years by a repressive dictatorship. In May, 1961 dictator Rafael Leonidas Trujillo was assassinated. Since then, with an aid policy linked to the country's progress toward democracy, the United States has been attempting to aid the Dominican Republic toward democratic constitutional rule.

U. S. officials said that though they so far had only sketchy information, the coup did not appear at first glance to involve a return of Trujillo interests to power.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that Bosch made urgent appeals this morning to several Latin American presidents in an effort to head off the military coup.

Officials here reported that Bosch and Mrs. Bosch made telephone calls to the presidents of Mexico, Costa Rica, Venezuela and the governor of Puerto Rico before communications were cut off.

Others calls were made, starting at 4 a. m. to Mexican President Adolfo Lopez Mateos, Venezuelan President Romulo Betancourt and Costa Rican President Francisco Orlich.

There was no immediate indication that they succeeded in getting through to any of the other presidents.

Civil Rights Bill Given Little Hope

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration's congressional lieutenants apparently believe they have little chance of getting a broad civil rights bill to the White House this year.

That is the interpretation of Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield's announcement that debate would begin Thursday on legislation to make the U. S. Civil Rights Commission a permanent government agency.

This was seen today as the forerunner to an about-face in previous strategy. The congressional leadership had said it would seek Senate action on House-passed civil rights and tax cut bills, in that order, before adjourning.

But the House is acting on taxes today, while one of its judiciary subcommittees still is struggling to give first-step approval to the civil rights measure. The civil rights bill is many weeks away from House action; the tax measure will go to the Senate Thursday.

Without new legislation, the six-year-old Civil Rights Commission must go out of business Nov. 30. The President has asked, in the catch-all civil rights bill, for a four-year extension.

Apparently the move to make it permanent means that no other civil rights measures will arise this session.

Pair Begins Briefings In Viet Nam

SAIGON, South Viet Nam, (UPI) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor started today a series of briefings to day aimed at finding out why it is taking so long to defeat the Communists in South Viet Nam.

McNamara and Taylor, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, arrived here Tuesday at President Kennedy's direction for a one-week sizerup of the situation in this troubled land.

They are to find out whether President Ngo Dinh Diem's political battle with his Buddhist opposition has hindered the fight against the Communist Viet Cong. The United States has committed about 14,000 military advisers and millions of dollars in aid to help the fight against the Reds.

The first call this morning of the two top American military men was at the cream-colored villa in downtown Saigon that houses the U. S. Military Assistance Command headquarters.

The villa is headquarters for Gen. Paul D. Harkins, MAAG chief, and for 10 other American generals on permanent duty here.

McNamara and Taylor also were expected to meet with U. S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge and other American civilian and military leaders in Saigon during the remainder of the day. They make their first trip to the war torn countryside Thursday.

Meantime, Vietnamese army troops and combat police continue the occupation of key points throughout the city that began with the declaration of martial law officially ended two weeks ago.

They were thought to be stationed in the city to prevent possible student demonstrations which might mar the visit of the American leaders.

'Guest' Decides Not To Remain

ALTADENA, Calif. (UPI) — The Harold J. Bissner family was just sitting down to dinner Tuesday night when a 120-pound deer leaped through a plate glass window in their living room. The doe then jumped out another smaller window.

Police Hope Bikini Pin-up Will Lead To Lost Thesis

CAMBRIDGE, MASS. (UPI) — A picture of a pretty blonde in a bikini hangs in the City Sanitation Department today. Police hope the bikini will lead to the recovery of a stolen college thesis.

Here are the bare facts:

The thesis and bikini were stolen from the rear seat of a car parked in Cambridge. The thesis represented four years work by Kost Pankivskyj who is studying for a doctorate at Harvard.

The pink bikini belongs to his wife Paula who also typed her husband's 125-page thesis on geology. All seven copies of the thesis were taken, along with a specimen of slate weighing seven-eighths pounds and the bikini.

Pankivskyj had discarded his notes for the thesis, the culmination of four years at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a one-year fellowship at Harvard.

Pankivskyj, a graduate of Larchmont, N.Y., High School, gathered much of the thesis material on field trips in Maine.

When police took a look at a snapshot of Paula in the bikini, they hit on an idea. They took the photo to a wall in the sanitation department office in hopes that a rubbish collector would recognize the bikini if he spotted it among debris he collected or dumped.

Presumably if the bikini is found, police would know in what area to begin looking for the thesis. Or the thesis might even be among the rubbish flagged for a closer look by any discovery of the bikini.

Pankivskyj had discarded his notes for the thesis, the culmination of four years at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a one-year fellowship at Harvard.

MARKS ESCAPE ROUTE

LINCOLN, England (UPI) — Phyllis Strutton, 29, says she broke into Lincoln jail and marked an escape route for her boyfriend with lipstick. She then used the route to get back out.

A magistrate Tuesday ordered her held for trial on charges of aiding an attempted escape.

In The Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS

Mishmash in the news:

Over near Canyonville, on the other side of the mountains, the other evening, a hitch-hiker was picked up by seemingly kindly motorists. At the first likely looking spot, they pulled off to the side of the highway, beat him severely and robbed him of his wallet and his suitcase.

Quite properly, the item made the front page of the Roseburg News-Review. It was UNSUAL — as is the case when a man bites a dog. Hardly a day passes when some kindly motorist fails to be beaten up and robbed by some wicked hitch-hiker whom he has picked up.

This time it happened the other way around.

Nostalgic thought:

Wouldn't it be wonderful if the olden golden days when one could UNHESITATINGLY pick up some stranger who needed a ride and safely carry him on his way could come back again?

What has happened to us, anyway?

Back in a Westchester county suburb of New York City during the Christmas season last year, patrons of an elementary school erected on the school lawn a creche depicting the birth of Jesus in the manger.

Sixteen residents of the suburb protested that the creche on the school grounds violated the first amendment to the U. S. Constitution.

As such, they claimed, it was a violation of the constitutional guarantee of separation of church and state, as well as the state constitution and the New York education law. So they brought suit to compel its removal.

What happened?

Well, fortunately, the case came eventually before a sensible judge who ruled that it was NOT a violation because it was merely a "passive accommodation of religion" and no one was FORCED TO LOOK AT IT.

Let's put it this way:

Thank the good Lord for SENSIBLE judges.

Chilly Blast Grips East

By United Press International

Nippy fall weather continued to keep temperatures on the chilly side in the East today.

Readings from New England to the Carolinas were in the 30s and 40s this morning.

On the other hand, the mercury was in the 80s in the arid Southwest.

Hurricane winds reaching 80 miles per hour churned Caribbean waters early today.

Temperatures Tuesday ranged from 20 at Montpelier, Vt., and Lebanon, N. H., to 107 at Thermal, Calif., and Yuma, Ariz.

Record lows for 30 early in the fall included 25 at Burlington, Vt., 26 at Atlantic City, N. J., 38 at Goldsboro, N. C., 39 at Raleigh, N. C., 37 at Richmond, Va., and 47 at Atlanta, Ga.

An inch of rain fell on Key West, Fla., during the night. Vero Beach, Fla., got 3.1 inches in a six hour period late Tuesday.

Death Takes Gen. Kliever

SALEM (UPI)—Major Gen. Paul Kliever, Oregon adjutant general and chief of staff for Gov. Mark Hatfield, died today.

Gen. Kliever, 54, head of the state's military department, was hospitalized early last week after suffering a heart attack.

Funeral arrangements were pending.

He was the third Oregon adjutant general to die in the last 45 years. Gen. Thomas Rilea died in February of 1959 and Gen. Alfred Hintz died in May of 1962.

Hatfield issued a statement praising Kliever as "a natural leader in a quiet, unassuming, effective way. His devotion to his state and nation was an inspiration."

Hatfield was notified of Kliever's death shortly before boarding a plane for Washington, D.C., where he speaks Thursday night.

Kliever was a native of Aberdeen, Idaho. He moved to Oregon as a youth.

Kennedy Trip Loses Nonpolitical Flavor

GRAND FORKS, N. D. (UPI) — President Kennedy sped into the Northern Plains states today with a call for "parity of opportunity" to help rural people come closer to the standards of urban living.

His "nonpolitical" tour picked up definite partisan tinges as it moved along.

On the second day of his fast-moving tour devoted to the subject of conservation and development of natural resources, Kennedy flew from Duluth, Minn., to Grand Forks to accept an honorary degree from the University of North Dakota and address himself to rural electrification problems of the vast farmlands of this area.

From Grand Forks, the President's itinerary took him to Cheyenne, Wyo., an afternoon speech at the University of Wyoming in Laramie; another speech date at Billings, Mont., and an overnight stop at the famed Wyoming resort and hunting area, Jackson Hole.

Compares Living Standards

In his prepared speech at the University of North Dakota, Kennedy said there was a great and continuing need for narrowing the differences in living standards of American city and rural populations, particularly in the cost of electric power which becomes increasingly needed in mechanized farming.

"We are seeking, in short, true parity of opportunity, but it will not come overnight," he said.

"To achieve it will require a new impetus in electrification development, new starts in our multipurpose dam programs, and new and greater use of our land, water, timber and wildlife resources."

The "non-political" label applied by the White House to Kennedy's 10,000-mile swing to the West was becoming somewhat academic. The President in a speaking appearance at Duluth Tuesday night threw away much of his prepared text which dealt with conservation programs.

He hammered instead at the need for public support of his $11 billion tax cut bill which is expected to come up for a vote in the House of Representatives today.

Asks Voters' Help

"We need you help," he said to a capacity crowd of more than 5,000 persons gathered in the fieldhouse of the University of Minnesota branch in Duluth. He said a large part of his audience was made up of Democrats, and he suggested that they put their shoulders to the wheel of pressure for his legislative recommendations designed to attack unemployment, which is high in the Duluth section.

"We must increase our aid to areas of chronic and substantial unemployment under the Area Redevelopment Act," he said.

"It must not be cut back now when the fruits of the program are beginning to be felt."

Rebels Jail President; Outlaw Reds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States today suspended relations with the Dominican Republic and cut off all aid to the Caribbean country following a bloodless military coup that toppled the government of President Juan Bosch.

State Department press officer Richard I. Phillips said the overthrow of Bosch constituted a "loss to the countries of the hemisphere including our own." Officials said the government of the Dominican Republic, as recognized by this country, has ceased to exist.

Demos Confident On Tax Cut Vote

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Confidence of victory, administration forces pressed for House passage today of an $11 billion tax cut, biggest in history.

As the showdown votes approached, the tide was running against Republican leaders in their attempt to attach an anti-spending amendment to the tax-cutting bill or defeat it on final passage.

Republican forces charged that it would be fiscally irresponsible for Congress to approve President Kennedy's plea for tax cuts without imposing specific spending curbs on him.

Replying to this argument, Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., told the House Tuesday in almost so many words that enactment of the tax cut would make it harder for Kennedy to win congressional approval of new spending programs.

Appeals To Conservatives

Mills, who heads the tax-writing House Ways & Means Committee, called for conservative support of the bill on the ground that it represented "a step away from big central government."

Unless high taxes are reduced to let private enterprise solve unemployment problems, Mills said, "others will find an answer for by increasing spending."

House GOP Leader Charles A. Halleck, Inc., said that if administration forces succeeded in defeating the Republican amendment, the bill's chances of final passage "will be in very serious jeopardy." But few members took that seriously.

Rep. Thomas B. Curtis, R-Mo., told the House he could find no fault with Mills' argument that the nation must choose between the road of increased spending and the road of reduced taxes. Curtis said, however, that the President and his advisers want to "travel both roads at the same time."

Attaches Condition

The GOP amendment would prohibit the tax cut unless the President in his budget message next January showed spending estimates of no more than $97 billion for the current fiscal year and $98 billion for the next year.

With House floor amendments barred except for the one proposed by GOP leaders, the 312-

Windy Edith Approaches Puerto Rico

SAN JUAN, P. R. (UPI) — Hurricane Edith swept across St. Lucia in the Caribbean today with 91 mile per hour winds and headed toward Puerto Rico.

A hurricane watch was ordered for Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, where the San Juan Weather Bureau said hurricane winds may be felt in the next 24 hours.

Reports of wind and flood damage on St. Lucia and Martinique began pouring into the San Juan Weather Bureau about midnight.

Gusts of 91 m.p.h. were reported just before the eye of the storm passed over the north part of St. Lucia at 4 a.m.

Hurricane warnings were discontinued for the Windward and Leeward Islands from Guadeloupe to St. Vincent when the storm passed, but gale warnings remained in effect for St. Lucia, Martinique and Dominica.

Gale warnings were discontinued for the areas north of Guadeloupe and south of St. Vincent including Barbados.

In the latest advisory, weathermen said the center of the storm was near latitude 14.6 north, longitude 62.1 west or about 75 miles west of Martinique and 380 miles southeast of San Juan. Highest sustained winds were 80 m.p.h.

There were torrential rains and winds up to 78 m.p.h. at Martinique this morning, the weather bureau said.

Disarmament Treaty Not In Near Future

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., said today it might take "two or three years" to develop any major new agreements with Russia as a sequel to the nuclear test ban treaty.

The Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, pleased with the 80-90 Senate vote approving the nuclear pact, emphasized that an early follow-up disarmament negotiations with the Soviet Union were unlikely.

Fulbright said that the treaty, which bans nuclear tests in the atmosphere, out in space and underwater, really was a "second step" toward peace with Russia rather than a "first step" as advertised.

"Our ratification of the Antarctic Treaty with Russia was the 'first step,'" he told a reporter.

"It wasn't considered significant at the time, but it has worked so far. And it had 21 votes against it in the Senate."

The vote on the Antarctic pact on Aug. 10, 1960, was 66-21, with 13 senators not voting. Eleven of the 21 who voted against it also voted against the test ban treaty Tuesday. But five who opposed the Antarctic Treaty voted for the test ban pact.

Will Take Time

Fulbright, like most administration officials, said he would not expect any disarmament negotiations "very soon."

"I think we'll have to have a little experience with this first," he said. "It may take two or three years."

President Kennedy called the test ban treaty a "small but significant" step toward peace.

The President congratulated the Senate for its action and particularly commended "the painstaking work" of both Democratic and Republican leaders "in bringing the treaty to this highly satisfactory vote."

When the Senate voted, 102 nations had signed the pact agreed on by the United States, Britain and Russia last summer. Red China and France, which aspire to their own nuclear forces, have indicated they will not sign it.

Rusk Holds Talks

Secretary of State Dean Rusk is holding talks in New York with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and other foreign officials to explore avenues of further agreement between East and West, including the possibility of stepped-up trade between this country and Russia.

Other possible steps that Rusk has listed include further agreements to reduce the danger of surprise attack; actual disarmament measures; reduction of the almost continual friction arising from a divided Germany and Berlin; increased flow of information and communication, and joint U. S.-Soviet agricultural or scientific efforts. The Soviets have proposed a non-aggression pact between Western nations and the Communist Warsaw Pact nations.
