

BEEF CHART

KNOW YOUR BEEF—This chart, issued by the National Livestock and Meat Board, shows the beef cuts, both wholesale and retail that the housewife gets from a beef carcass. Proper selection, storage, cooking and carving are all essential to the best use and enjoyment of beef.

Six Basic Methods For Cooking Beef

The method selected for cooking fresh beef cuts depends on: (1) the tenderness; (2) the size and thickness of the cut and (3) the available cooking facilities. All cuts can be cooked easily so that the meat is tender, juicy and attractive. Large cuts including rib, rump (high quality) and sirloin tip (high quality) should be roasted at 30 degrees F. to 325 degrees F. until the meat thermometer registers rare, medium or well done. For easier carving, and more attractive servings, it is desirable to allow a cooked roast to "set" 15 to 30 minutes. Meat continues to cook upon removal from the oven. If the roast is permitted to "set," it should be removed from the oven when the thermometer registers five degrees to 10 degrees lower than the desired doneness. Tender steaks including rib, Delmonico, T-bone, Porterhouse, sirloin, and filet mignon, cut one inch or more thick, should be broiled at moderate temperature to desired doneness. Tender steaks cut less than one inch thick may be panbroiled or pan-fried.

Less tender cuts including chuck, round and rump should be braised as pot-roasts or steaks. Fresh beef brisket, plate, neck, shank and cubes from less tender cuts are usually cooked in liquid, although cross cut shanks and beef stew meat are also braised. Cuts cooked by braising or in liquid should be cooked well done.

Ground beef may be roasted (baked) as loaves: broiled, pan-broiled or pan-fried as patties and prepared by a combination of methods in casserole and similar type dishes.

TO ROAST
Season with salt and pepper, place meat fat side up on rack in open roasting pan, insert meat thermometer. Do not add water.

Do not cover. Do not baste. Roast in slow oven, 300 to 325 degrees F., and roast to desired doneness.

TO BROIL

Set oven regular for broiling. Place meat two to five inches from heat and broil until top of meat is brown. Season with salt and pepper, turn meat and cook until done. Season and serve at once.

TO PANBROIL

Place meat in heavy frying pan. Do not add fat or water. Cook slowly, turning occasionally. Pour fat from skillet as it accumulates. Brown meat on both sides, season and serve at once.

TO BRAISE

Brown meat on all sides in fat in heavy utensil. Season with salt and pepper, add small amount of liquid, cover tightly and cook at low temperature until tender.
