

Republicans Call Stockpiling Report 'Slanted'

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A controversial report on the nation's multi-billion-dollar stockpile program, charging cabinet-level favoritism during the Eisenhower administration, was branded as "slanted" today by Republicans.

Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., chairman of the special stockpile investigating subcommittee, made the 100-page document public Wednesday night at a hastily called news conference following a series of partisan charges and counter-charges over its contents.

Prominently featured in the report was a critical review of the roles played by former Treasury Secretary George M. Humphrey and Commerce Secretary Sinclair Weeks, and one time cabinet member Arthur S. Flemming during the time he served as director of the Office of Defense Mobilization. But Humphrey appeared to be the chief target.

Charge Political Motivation

Republicans said the report was "politically motivated," and charged it was compiled with the aid of personnel from President Kennedy's office.

Symington released the report despite a 340-3 voting deadlock in the subcommittee against approving it. During a closed session earlier in the day Democratic Sen. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina lined up with two Republicans, Sens. J. Glenn Beall of Maryland and Clifford P. Case of New Jersey, in opposition.

Symington was supported by Democratic Sens. Howard W. Cannon of Nevada and ailing Clair Engle of California, who voted by proxy.

Ike Defends Policies

Case later issued a letter from Eisenhower defending stockpile policies during his eight years in the White House as necessary in the national interest.

Beall charged the report was "slanted in its approach, lacking in objectivity and unwarranted in the attacks it makes on former government officials."

He said that although the program of stockpiling strategic and critical materials for emergency purposes began under former President Harry S. Truman, the report concentrated on the Eisenhower policies of 1954-1955.

"I am shocked the respected officials of the Eisenhower administration are made the objects of unjustified charges through the use of distortions, omissions and misinterpretations," Beall said.

The report said that during the Korean War emergency "some contractors enjoyed excessive and unconscionable profits from their sales of . . . commodities to the government. This was particularly true in nickel." President Kennedy made the same charge in the same terms when he sparked the investigation in early 1962.

Charge Windfall Profits

The report charged that M. A. Hanna Co. mining and smelting enterprises, controlled by the Humphrey family, enjoyed "windfall profits" of more than $17 million on a government-built nickel plant, and also profited from premium prices on its sales of nickel to the national stockpile of strategic materials.

A multi-million-dollar Calumet & Hecla Co. copper contract represented a "clear instance of special treatment and high-level official interference to the advantage of one contractor and to the substantial disadvantage of the government," the report said.

In 1955, the report said, Humphrey, Weeks and Flemming, then head of the Defense Mobilization Office, worked out a deal favorable to Calumet & Hecla.

Girls Caught Shoplifting

Two 16-year-old girls who police say went on a shopping spree in three downtown stores Wednesday afternoon were nabbed in the third store by a clerk.

One of the girls is a junior at Klamath Union High School and the other, officers said, is married.

Included in their loot were underwear, a dress, shampoo, hair color and other cosmetics.

They were arrested in Woolworth's Store after being held by a clerk. Later, they admitted shoplifting in the Sears store and Payless Drugs.

The girls said they stole some underwear in Sears, then moved to Payless where they stole the cosmetics. They had taken a dress and other underwear in Woolworth's when they were caught.

The two were turned over to the juvenile authorities.

Pope Observes Birthday

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—Pope Paul VI celebrated his 66th birthday today in the fourth month of a pontifical reign marked by promises of dramatic change in the Roman Catholic Church.

The pontiff, born Giovanni Battista Montini in Concesio in northern Italy, first appeared in the white robes of the spiritual leader of the world's Roman Catholics on the balcony of St. Peter's Basilica three months and five days ago.

Still considered a "young" Pope, Paul's actions have shown his determination to lead the church into the space age of the 20th century. His predecessors

... Pope John XXIII, became Pope just before his 77th year. In the early days of his pontificate, Pope Paul promised to continue the Ecumenical Council started by Pope John. The second session of the council will begin Sunday.

He also pledged to continue John's policies, above all his battle for world peace and to make the church more up-to-date.

Grape experts report the year has seen a 50 per cent increase in the number of acres of grapes treated with gibberellin—a vitamin-like substance.

He was hired to mate them... But not to date them!!

Flemming Defends Role In Stockpiling Program

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A former Eisenhower cabinet official charged today that Senate stockpile investigators "virtually ignored" their colleagues in drafting a highly critical report on Republican stockpile policies.

The statement was issued by Dr. Arthur S. Flemming following release of a disputed report charging cabinet-level favoritism and "excessive profits" in the vast program during the Eisenhower administration.

Flemming defended his role in purchases and sales of strategic metals and materials for the $8.9 billion stockpile while he was head of the Office of Defense Mobilization.

Flemming, who figured prominently in the report made public Wednesday, headed ODM from 1953-57, and later was secretary of Health, Education and Welfare under former President Eisenhower.

He said in a statement that the special Senate stockpile subcommittee, headed by Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., "virtually ignored" detailed stockpile reports available from the Joint Committee on Defense Production.

Flemming also said that "I am glad that when the Eisenhower administration left office, our nation finally did have substantial stockpiles of strategic and critical materials."

"Our strategic materials resources should not be dissipated until determinations have been made by competent authorities as to what our present objectives should be. This (the Kennedy administration) has not yet done."
