Negro Leader Praises Fairness In Expelling

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — The state field secretary for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) said Wednesday the University of Mississippi was fair and courteous in expelling its only Negro student for carrying a pistol.

"Cleve McDowell wasn't expelled because he is a Negro," Charles Evers told United Press International Wednesday. "He was expelled because he broke the law."

Evers, who took over the top NAACP post in Mississippi when his brother, Medgar, was slain by a sniper's bullet last June, appeared with McDowell before the Student Judiciary Council at Ole Miss Tuesday to hear the university's case against the 21-year-old Negro student, McDowell, a law student, was expelled for carrying a 22-caliber pistol on the campus.

Evers praised the council for recommending to university authorities that McDowell be expelled. He said "Ole Miss" officials "merely upheld the law."

"If every Negro was given as equal a chance as Cleve was given," said Evers, "then they wouldn't be afraid to go to court in Mississippi."

He singled out Champ Terney, president of the council and a son-in-law of Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., for special praise.

"He showed the respect that should be shown to all Americans," said Evers. "He is a real gentleman."

McDowell's attorney, Jack Young of Jackson, confirmed for the first time Wednesday that his client did carry a pistol to class but indicated he did so with good reason.

"There is no denying that McDowell had the pistol," said Young. "There were certain circumstances which prompted him to carry it."

However, neither Young nor McDowell would reveal the circumstances.

Young said it had not been decided whether McDowell would would show up for a justice of the peace hearing in Oxford Saturday to face charges of carrying a concealed weapon. McDowell could forfeit $250 bond instead.

Economic Action Urged To Further Civil Rights

By United Press International

A Negro leader called Wednesday for a national program of economic shock treatments to push civil rights.

Wyatt Tee Walker, executive director of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC), told the organization's convention in Richmond, Va., that the nation is not fully aware of the Negro's plight.

"A national program of economic withdrawal during the coming Christmas season . . . would throw the business world into shock," he said. "Maybe then and only then will we gain the support of the nation's financial leaders to exert some initiative in eliminating the evils of segregation and discrimination."

At Birmingham, Ala., police revealed that two bombs which exploded on a street corner in a Negro neighborhood Wednesday morning were designed to kill, not scare. Officers said one bomb —largely noise — was to draw a crowd of Negroes, and the later exploding bomb, filled with shrapnel, was to deal mass death and injury.

A two-man presidential team began a series of meetings with Birmingham city and Negro leaders Wednesday but created ill will among some Negro leaders who said they were snubbed by the team.

Joint Body Discusses Wheat Deal

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Administration officials meet with a joint session of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and the House Agriculture Committee today to discuss a possible wheat deal with Russia.

The closed-door session was called at the request of President Kennedy.

On hand for the discussion will be Agriculture Secretary Orville Freeman and Commerce Secretary Luther Hodges.

The meeting followed reports that American businessmen have been conferring in Canada with Russian delegates to discuss the sale of surplus wheat. Russia already has signed a half-billion-dollar agreement with Canada for wheat.

In calling the joint session today, Rep. Harold D. Cooley, D-N.C., said he was disappointed that more surplus products have not been sold to foreign nations.

Other congressional news:

Civil Rights: The Senate today took up a bill to extend the life of the Civil Rights Commission for one year. Compared with the bristling measure approved by a House subcommittee, the Senate bill was weak. It was regarded as no non-controversial that passage was expected with no more than token debate.

Wheat Belt Backs Idea Of Grain Sale To Reds

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT
United Press International

The wheat belt gave guarded approval today to suggestions the United States sell surplus grain to Russia.

"It doesn't make a lot of difference whom we sell wheat to. . ." summed up one grain terminal official simply.

"We have plenty and apparently the Russians are short," rancher J. Tipps Hamilton, Kirley, S.D., said. "Sometimes we have to put aside our hostilities and help those who are less well off."

Actually, those who were opposed to selling wheat to Russia —or who had doubts — did not do so on the basis of the "cold war." Rather, they raised economic questions as to what the form of payment would be and whether the sale would really shrink this country's huge pile of grain.

Fertilizers, increased acreage and "farm automation" have caused a tremendous boost in agricultural production in the United States since World War II began, and have left this country with one of its biggest headaches.

Seek Solution

Both Republicans and Democrats tried — but were largely faulted for their farm programs. And yards of huge government graneries continue to dot the countryside throughout the Middle West.

On the other hand, it has been reported the Russians have been having serious agricultural problems of the opposite kind. Production is low and food prices are sky high.

A fortnight ago Soviet negotiators signed a $500 million Canadian wheat deal.

Against this background, it was learned four private grain traders are in Ottawa, Canada, trying to lay the groundwork for a large United States-Russia wheat deal.

Kennedy Shows Interest

At the same time, President Kennedy winged his way on a cross-country trip along the rim of the wheat country, and it was learned he had discussed the possibility of grain sales to Russia.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said the President had not decided on new policy but has "evidenced interest in these developments."

Existing government regulations forbid the sale of subsidized farm commodities to Communist nations. But such congressmen as Sens. Frank Carlson, R-Kan., and Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., have called publicly for reversing the restrictions.

20 Heroes Win Cash And Medals

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — A 21-year-old laundry worker from Tucson, Ariz., was awarded a silver medal and $1,000 from the Carnegie Hero Commission today for rescuing seven women during an explosion and fire at a laundry and dry cleaning plant.

Ventura Urquidez Jr., disregarding choking smoke and scorching flames, led Mrs. Lucy G. Villa and Mrs. Rossie L. Chesser to safety shortly after the blast last March 29 which killed seven persons.

He returned inside and reached two more women, leading one and carrying the other to safety. Urquidez then carried Carmen Ramos and Olivia Aros to safety and made one more trip inside to remove another woman just before the walls of the one-story structure collapsed.

The commission also awarded death benefits of $600 and a bronze medal to Ethel C. Robinson, aunt of Booker C. Olden, who died in an attempt to save two children from burning to death in Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 6, 1962.

Six sticks of dynamite exploded prematurely Aug. 14, 1962 at a copper mine in Oracle, Ariz., injuring Wilbur D. Nelson, 48, and Merely C. Fairless, 40.

Nelson, despite painful injuries and knowing that other dynamite charges set earlier would soon explode, crawled to the severely injured Fairless. Nelson lifted Fairless onto his shoulders then staggered to safety minutes before the other charges exploded.

Fairless died 32 hours later of his injuries. Nelson, disabled for five weeks, was awarded a silver medal and $500.

The awards were among 20 made today by the commission in 11 states and Canada. Since its inception in 1904, the commission has awarded more than $9 million to heroes and their dependents and has issued 4,673 medals.

VA Walks Get Covers

PORTLAND (UPI) — Contracts have been let for construction of covered walkways at the Roseburg Veterans Administration Hospital, Sen. Maurine Neuberger, D-Ore., notified the American Legion today.

The Legion has been a long-time advocate of covering the 400-yards of walkways between dormitories and the dining hall to provide protection for patients.

Sen. Neuberger said the project will cost $30,000 and take 90 days. Mel Gregory, Roseburg, was awarded the concrete contract and ENCO, Portland, won the contract to provide the metal superstructure.

Parents Agree To Allow Young Runaways To Wed

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — The 15-year-old niece of Princess Grace of Monaco had her prince and castle today — an 18-year-old encyclopedia salesman and a tiny furnished apartment.

And both families approved.

The parents of Mary Lee Davis, who was a flower girl in her famous aunt's royal wedding, and John Paul Jones Jr., an architect's son, flew here Wednesday from Philadelphia to give their consent to the youngsters' forthcoming wedding.

The teen-agers had been missing since Aug. 28. Police found them here Tuesday night, living in a modest furnished apartment. Miss Davis worked as a waitress, and Jones was selling books.

"The children have the permission of both parents to be married," Eugene C. Conlin, the girl's stepfather, and John Paul Jones Sr., both of Philadelphia, said in a joint verbal statement.

A half-hour later, the young couple strolled out of an apartment, hand in hand.

"I'm glad it's all out in the open," the handsome young Jones said.

Miss Davis, tall and striking, just smiled. She looked tired.

Then they drove off in their old light blue car to the apartment they had shared for three weeks.

Miss Davis, her long, dark hair hanging loose, wore a trenchcoat over a plain dress, and flat-style shoes without stockings. Jones, tieless, wore his old high school blazer with a "1963" class label on the breast pocket.

Jones, a 1963 graduate of Chestnut Hill Academy, a college preparatory school, told newsmen he and his bride-to-be planned to stay in Des Moines "for a while," although no definite plans had been made.

He said he might continue selling encyclopedias.

His boss, James Walden, said, "As far as I am concerned, Jones is staying with our firm." Walden said Jones could keep the job as long as he wanted — "He's a real good man, a hard worker."
