

Security Officer Under Fire After Dealings With Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department is attempting to fire one of its security officers, reportedly for giving confidential information to a Senate committee without authorization from his superiors.

State Department spokesmen said a "letter of charges" was given Monday to Otto F. Otepka, J. chief of the evaluations division of the department's security office. The division deals with personnel security.

Robert Morris, former chief counsel for the Senate internal security subcommittee, said in Dallas, Tex., Thursday that Otepka was accused of giving documents marked "confidential" and "for official use only" to J. G. Saurwine, the subcommittee's present chief counsel.

Replying to Morris's statement, State Department spokesmen said Otepka had been given 10 days to answer the charges or face dismissal. They would not say whether the charges had anything to do with the subcommittee.

"The department does not make public charges against employees," said press officer Richard I. Phillips.

The subcommittee has been investigating various sections of the State Department, including its security, passport and visa operations. Otepka has appeared as a witness numerous times in response to committee requests and with approval of the State Department.

"The executive branch of government has from time to time invoked the doctrine of 'executive privilege' to withhold information from Congress. There is still on the books an executive order signed by President Harry S. Truman March 13, 1948, barring disclosure to Congress of individual government loyalty investigations.

Under the order "all reports, records and files relative to the loyalty of employees or prospective employees . . . shall be maintained in confidence and shall not be transmitted or disclosed except as required in the efficient conduct of business."

Negotiations Recessed

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan requested and Canada and the United States agreed today to recess their negotiations here over fishing rights for salmon and halibut in the rich northeastern Pacific fishing grounds.

The foreign office said today's meeting was called off at Japan's request in order that it might have more time to study U.S.-proposed modifications to the draft of a new fisheries convention.

The talks, which have been held behind closed doors, will resume Monday.

Sources close to the Japanese delegation said Japan has decided to postpone a decision on the proposed modification until the return home of Prime Minister Hayato Ikeda and Agriculture Forestry Minister Munenori Aka-gi.

This means the talks are likely to continue at least until Oct. 6. The United States has agreed to drop the controversial abstention principle under which Japan voluntarily has refrained from fishing for salmon and halibut off Alaska, Canada and the Northern U.S. Pacific coast.

In place of the abstention principle the United States has proposed that until the North Pacific Fisheries Commission determines that salmon and halibut resources are not being utilized fully, fishing will still be restricted to "methods and practices now enforced."

Japan contends that this would prevent its fishermen from sharing in more of the catch.

Salem Parents Wanted To Care For Two Boys

SALEM (UPI)—The parents of Danny and Ronald Presnell, two Salem boys they sent to Boys Town, Neb., told Marion County Circuit Judge George R. Duncan Thursday they wanted to make a home for the boys here.

Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Hackworth, the mother and stepfather of the two boys, said they had not intended to abandon them. They said they were driven by financial and emotional worries to send the youngsters by bus to Omaha in hopes they could be better cared for there.

Judge Duncan ordered the boys placed under temporary jurisdiction of the Marion County Juvenile Department. Juvenile director Richard McDevitt said he would seek the boys' return to Salem.

Departure Times Shift

Two West Coast Airlines flights linking Klamath Falls and Sacramento each have been set back 15 minutes, the airlines reported Friday. The flights leaving this city for the California capital now depart daily at 10:45 a.m. and 9:50 p.m.

The new schedule went into effect Sept. 20 with the inauguration of a new non-stop flight between Portland and Medford, forming the only direct air connection between the two cities. It is that flight which proceeds to Klamath Falls and then Sacramento, the company disclosed.

Weather Astoria Hosts Kennedy Briefly This Afternoon

ASTORIA (UPI) — Astorians awaited a brief afternoon visit from President Kennedy today, hopeful of hearing some favorable word about the future of the old Tongue Point Naval Station.

All members of Oregon's Democratic congressional delegation and Republican Gov. Mark Hatfield were scheduled to greet Kennedy at 1:20 p.m. when his helicopter arrived from Tacoma.

The visit was to be brief—only 15 minutes. Kennedy was to view the installation, meet with local officials but planned no speech.

He then was to fly to Seattle-Tacoma airport and fly to Redding, Calif. — passing over the Oregon Dunes and the Rogue Basin Project in Southern Oregon en route. The Democratic congressional delegation was to accompany him, then return to Portland by plane this evening.

Barricades to control a crowd of 3,000 to 5,000 persons have been constructed at Tongue Point, located just east of here. Many Clatsop County schools planned to dismiss classes to let children see the President.

Tongue Point was completed in 1939 as a Navy air station, converted into a reserve fleet base in 1946 and closed in 1960 as surplus. Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., has been after the administration to find a new use for the facility.

Kennedy had been scheduled earlier to speak in Portland but this was called off in the face of threatened picketing of a new public housing project by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., said the President may return in the next few months and stay longer. She said she was "sorry about the combination of events and statements that caused this cancellation."

Kennedy's afternoon flight south was to take him over the scenic dunes area between Florence and North Bend. Bills have been introduced to convert it into a national seashore.

Before landing at Redding he also was to pass over the Rogue Basin project and view sites for three proposed dams—Lewis Creek, Elk Creek and Cooper. No actual work has been done on the dams since money is available only for planning.

Earlier, Kennedy said in a speech prepared for delivery at Cheney Stadium at Tacoma the fight over conservation has been waged since the beginning of this century. "But only recently," he added, "has outdoor recreation become a full partner in the conservation movement."

Atomic Power Plant Started

HANFORD (UPI) — President Kennedy ushered in the age of atomic electricity Thursday with a wave of a uranium-tipped wand.

More than 30,000 persons broiled under a brutal sun for about three hours to be present for the historic occasion here.

Kennedy used the atomic pointer to start a 60-foot crane and scoop shovel, which actually turned the first earth for construction of a powerhouse to produce 860,000 kilowatts of firm electricity.

"I assume this was actually on the level and that there was nobody over there," Kennedy quipped as he gestured to the crane. The ceremony took place in a dusty area beside the Columbia River. The crowd began to arrive before noon and long before the President arrived, the speculators were standing shoulder to shoulder across the hot, dry desert.

It was not a demonstrative crowd. They cheered only infrequently. But the fact that they came at all, 37 miles from the nearest town, attested to the sense of history.

The audience was a liberally sprinkled with children. The power plant scheduled for construction here will use steam to turn giant turbines. The steam is a by-product of the production of weapons-grade plutonium in an atomic reactor.

The entire reactor will cost $195 million, with about $25 million associated specifically with the electric generating facilities, which are scheduled to begin producing power by October, 1965. Although Kennedy's trip was

Throngs Greet President At Mormon Tabernacle

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (UPI) — The mighty Mormon Tabernacle choir of 375 voices had the ancient structure throbbing with the soaring final bars of "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

A tall slender figure in a dark blue suit carefully flicked perspiration from his face as he listened intently, twisted in his chair on the Tabernacle rostrum for a view of the singers arrayed behind him. It was President Kennedy Thursday night the biggest ovation of his current western tour.

More than 8,000 persons jammed the vault-roofed Tabernacle and easily double that number swarmed futilely around each of the many entrances to the huge hall, striving to squeeze at least within sight of the rostrum where Kennedy was flanked by Democratic leaders — and President David O. McKay, 90-year-old spiritual leader of two million members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon).

What made the evening take on successful, if not unusual, proportions for Kennedy was that he had delivered a rather stern indictment of many policies and ideas dear to the hearts of the radical right, the John Birch Society and such Republican conservatives as Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona.

Such a speech runs counter to the conservatism that marks this city, seat of the Mormon church, and for that matter, much of the state.
