READY FOR SERIES — A lot of work is being done to get Yankee Stadium ready for the World Series which gets underway Wednesday. The Los Angeles Dodgers arrived in New York on Monday and Sandy Koufax has been nominated to throw in the opening game against Whitey Ford, both ace left-handers. Ralph Terry Accepts Fate As Yankee Bull Pen Star

By OSCAR FRALEY
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) One year made a tremendous difference in the life of big Ralph Terry but the tall pitcher from Oklahoma shrugs off the quirks of fate with the studied analysis that "a man has to be realistic."

One year ago as the New York Yankees went into the World Series, Terry was one of their most potent pitching guns. He had led the American League with 23 triumphs and he followed up with two wins in the series, capping a big year with a 1-0 victory over the Giants in a heart-stopping finale.

This year he is practicaly ignored as the Yankees get ready to go in against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The talk this time is of Whitey Ford and two younger men, Al Downing and Jim Bouton. And the proven mop-up man in the late innings is Hal Reniff.

Terry, it was alluded, would be in the bull pen for a "long inning" relief job. If, in other words, the starter was kayoed early in the game.

"How come Terry is in the bull pen?" somebody asked Yankee manager Ralph Houk.

The iron major fixed the questioner with a pair of icy eyes and there was barbed wire in his tone as he said:

"I'll pitch whoever I think best."

Houk hasn't come out and said pointedly that Terry is in the rocking chair brigade. But he has said that Ford will start the first game, Downing the second and Bouton the third. Which, with a day off for travel to the coast after the first two, brings Ford back again in the rotation. Barring the possibility that the weak-hitting Dodgers will play bombs away early against one of the starters, Terry may view this one from afar.

But he accepts it philosophically, by no gesture or inflection hinting that he might be disgruntled after another year in which he led the league in complete games and innings pitched.

"I didn't have a bad year," pondered the 27-year-old righthander who won 17 while losing 15. "But I didn't have a good year, either. Some of those I lost could have gone my way but, then, on the other hand, some of those I won could have gone the other way."

There is no jealousy in the slender pitcher whose main fault, if he has one, is that he refuses to "bruch back" the hitters and they therefore can take a toehold against him.

"Bouton is the best righthander in the American League today," he observes quietly. "And you can't get away from the fact that Downing has pitched so well he deserves a start."

No alibi. No recriminations. And the Yankees know full well that the workhorse pitcher will give them his best at all times. He doesn't know any other way to go.

"Whatever I can do," he said, looking forward to the series, "I'll do. But whatever it is, I'm hungry to do a good job."

Houk, scheming to get the best tools working against the Dodgers, admits that "Terry could play a big part for us."

But it has to be small consolation as he looks back on the headlines of just a year ago.

Experts Advise Care Of Venison In Field

Fresh, flavorful venison for the table starts with careful treatment of the meat in the field, advises Andrew Landforce, Oregon State University extension wildlife management specialist.

Keep deer meat at its best by cooling it quickly—the quicker the better, Landforce says. He urges that the deer be skinned as soon as possible.

It's ideal when deer can be field dressed and immediately taken to camp, home or the cold storage locker to be skinned, he noted. Probably the cleanest meat from the woods is handled this way.

However, this isn't always possible and Landforce offers the following suggestions for care of deer that can't be taken back right away.

In Western Oregon, unless the deer is moved easily from the field, dress it, hang it in a tree and skin it at once. Split the carcass in half and leave the last neck vertebrae connect to help balance the halves while hanging.

Preferably let hang until the meat is no longer sticky. Dry meat is easier to keep clean. Hanging over night in the cold woods is good. The meat gets cold and a glaze forms over it.

If pack animals are impractical, cut the deer in quarters and drop each quarter into an individual clean cloth bag. Strap your load on the pack board for carrying out of the woods.

Immediately upon reaching your destination, hang meat in a cool, dry place. The cold storage locker is ideal, but lots of good venison has also been cared for in garages and woodsheds.

For Eastern Oregon conditions, if you can't get the deer back to camp and skinned immediately, field dress and skin the deer in the field. Hanging the deer in a tree is preferred, but, if this is not possible, remove the hide while the deer is lying on the ground.

Use the skin and meat sacks to keep meat clean while skinning. After the hide is off, quarter the carcass and put the pieces in individual meat sacks. Pack back to camp and hang it up at once.

If it is not practical to carry the meat back to camp right away, hang it in a tree or lay it upon poles or rocks to allow air to circulate around the meat, speeding up the cooling process.

It is always best to let meat hang and thoroughly cool before moving it. When the meat gets a glaze over it, handling is easier and meat can be kept much cleaner.

Deer eventually will cool when hung with the hide on. In some cases, deer are downed in circumstances which makes skinning impractical, but even then cool the animal as quickly as possible in order to keep the meat at its best, says the specialist.

Care should also be taken to keep the meat cool on the way home, Landforce stresses. A carrier or rack on the car top will allow cooling air to circulate around the meat. Never carry venison in a tightly closed car trunk or on the hood of a car where engine heat is transferred to the meat.

WILDCATS LOSE GUARD

EVANSTON, Ill. (UPI)—Northwestern will be without the services of Jack Cvercko, its All-America guard, when the Wildcats tangle with Illinois on Saturday. Cvercko, who suffered a knee injury against Indiana, will be out of action

USC Coach Abandons Three Platoon System

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Coach John McKay today abandoned his three unit system at University of Southern California, declaring it unworkable under the new substitution rule.

The coach of the 1962 national champions tried the three platoon system that proved so successful for his Trojans last season during the first two games.

But Monday he told the Southern California Football Writers, "I'm through with the three unit substitution system: I find that I can't use it under the new rules."

Barnes Likes New Rule

But coach Bill Barnes of UCLA found the new substitution rule to his liking and declared that only in an isolated rare instance was he unable to get a specific man into the game when he wanted to use him.

"We played 30 men against Penn State Saturday and had no problems growing out of the substitution rule except in one instance," he said.

There wasn't a winner among the three top football teams representing the area. But Barnes was pleased with his team's play in the close loss to Penn State, and Harland Svare of the Los Angeles Rams pro club drew some consolation from a strong defensive effort.

McKay, however, did not feel Southern California played a very good game in dropping a 17-12 decision to Oklahoma in the nationally televised game of the week.

"We've got power," McKay declared, "but we're hurting because we can't seem to throw the football. Since that appears to be the case, we're going to run more."

The outspoken McKay expressed doubts that the Sooners should be rated the top team in the nation for beating his national champions becauuse he said Oklahoma lacked a passing attack.

He felt the Trojans could have scored three or four touchdowns if the team had been able to complete more of its passes and he was puzzled over the inability of All-America end Hal Bedsole to hold on to well-thrown passes in key situations.

"We got beat by a good football team and we didn't play well," McKay continued. "If we don't play better, we'll lose to Michigan State here Friday night."

Zeno At QB

Barnes announced one major change for his Bruins starting with the Stanford game this weekend which calls for Carl Jones to move from quarterback to halfback to take advantage of his running and defensive ability while Larry Zeno gets the call at quarterback as a result of his fine work against Penn State.

The Rams remained in Cleveland to drill for their game with the Green Bay Packers and will work on developing scoring punch inside the 10-yard line, Svare told the writers in a telephonic interview.

David Jones was named pro player of the week for his performance against the Cleveland Browns with Pete Beathard of Southern California selected university player of the week and guard Walter Johnson of Los Angeles State getting the vote as college lineman.

Houston Vet Paces Loop

NEW YORK (UPI) — Charley Hennigan can't understand why he's the leading pass receiver in the American Football League.

Hennigan, a four year veteran with the Houston Oilers, feels the defense in the AFL gets better each season, making it tougher all-round for receivers.

Hennigan replaced Oakland's Art Powell as the leading receiver this week. He has caught 28 passes for 543 yards compared to 26 and 471 yards for Powell.

A former Northwestern Louisiana State College athlete, Hennigan also is making a bid for the scoring leadership. He's scored 30 points this season on five touchdowns but remains three points behind Boston's Gino Cappelletti who has 33.

Jack Kemp of Buffalo moved back into first place in the passing race ahead of Kansas City's Len Dawson.

Kemp, who suffered a finger injury in Saturday's night game with Houston, has completed 57 of 104 attempts for 867 yards. Dawson has completed 55 of 87 for 697 yards.

Fullback Larry Garron of the Boston Patriots retained his rushing leadership this week with 267 yards in 61 carries. Charley Tolar of Houston is second with 236 yards in 69 carries.

Curley Johnson of the New York Jets leads the league in punting with a 46.3 average on 11 kicks. Jim Fraser of the Denver Broncos is second with a 46.2 average.

The leader in pass interceptions is Tommy Morrow of the Oakland Raiders. Keith Lincoln of the San Diego Chargers leads in punt returns
