U.S. Rejects Japanese Suggestions

TOKYO (UPI) — The United States rejected as "inadequate" Tuesday modifications proposed by Japan to a new North Pacific fishery convention.

The communique said, however, the U.S. was "encouraged that the differences between the positions of the three delegations were reduced to some extent" by the proposals made by the Japanese and Canadian delegations to the current fishery talks.

But the chairman of the U.S. delegation added that the Japanese proposals "were in his view inadequate in that they did not resolve certain problems of salmon and halibut," the communique said.

"He then suggested that in view of the importance of the continuing problems the meeting should give consideration to its future course."
