BPW Founders Recall Early Days Of Group

Women, individually or collectively, rarely admit to being more than 39 years old. Klamath Falls Business and Professional Women's Club not only admits its 39 years—it's proud to be almost 40.

Ida Momyer Odell calls that "quite a swatch of time off the yardage of eternity." Mrs. Odell says she actually came to live in Klamath Falls in 1895 and as the beloved historian tells about the early days of the town, it becomes again a vigorous frontier community bursting beyond its nucleus around Link River.

She has seen the beginning of many things and her blue eyes reflect the merriment she recalls as one of the organizers of the first business women's groups here.

She relates that in 1924 the Women's Library Club, a strong public influence then, as it still is, undertook the formation of a branch for business and professional women.

Mrs. Odell, a member of Momyer and Momyer Real Estate and Insurance; Coral Sabo of the First National Bank; Gertrude Moore, employed by the First Trust and Savings Bank; Frances Racknor, with Houston and Phelps, the town's largest grocery store; and Lena Dennis, city treasurer, could well claim to be business women, so they became the five original members. Mrs. Lyle Kimball, teacher and library club member, was the managing force and mothered the new club through its infancy. Later she was to be awarded lifetime membership in BPW.

The business women began to meet in the basement of the old library building located where the present courthouse stands. Another meeting place was the Blue Bird, a cafe and candy store which Mrs. Odell calls "an institution in those days."

Mrs. Racknor became the first president because, she claims, no one else would accept the job and she sought to be agreeable. Soon the infant outgrew its cradle and moved away from the old home in the library to the famed White Pelican Hotel, center of the town's social life, and managed at that time by a new member, Mrs. Hope Kilbourn. There, often seated on the floor in front of the crackling fireplace in the "little parlor" that jutted toward Esplanade Avenue they visited, sang and exchanged experiences. Mrs. Odell remembers very little serious purpose then, only that they all "loved it." She delights in the memory of an adventuresome trip over the Green-springs one Sunday for a picnic in Lithia Park.

But there was soon to be a change. With a membership of 15, they began to feel they were growing up and should take on some responsibility. Mrs. Racknor was elected to a second term as president. They applied for and received a charter from the National Federation of Business and Professional Women, in its childhood, too, having been founded in 1919 with its basic purpose expressed as "A Better Business Woman for a Better Business World."

Klamath Falls BPW has grown toward maturity with the federation with the common aim to promote the interests of business and professional women. With its national strength it has supported and brought about many important legislative measures directly benefiting the working woman.

Nationally the local club helps support the Chinese Nursing Home in Formosa. An important state project is the continuing scholarship for a promising Klamath County high school senior girl. And it involves itself with lively sincerity in all community interests, hoping to weave durable threads into the present "swatch of time."

OAES Meet

The Oregon Association of Educational Secretaries first meeting for the 1963-64 school year will be Oct. 12 at the Ashland Junior High School in Ashland. Sandra Mitchell is chairman. Registrations will be handled by Mrs. Maxine York, 885 Siskiyou Street in Ashland.

In many nations, community television sets are installed in public places.

GREENSPRINGS GARDEN CLUB

The Greensprings Garden Club met Oct. 4 at the home of Mrs. Elmer Colson on Laurel Street. To celebrate the club's fourth birthday, a cake baked by Mrs. Ray Billings and her co-hostess, Mrs. Richard Harris, was served during the social hour.

President Mrs. Lane Smith Jr. conducted the meeting. Mrs. Zora Luce gave the horticulture lesson on the wintering of chrysanthemums.

Mrs. Guy Moore, garden therapy chairman, suggested the group give to shut-ins throughout the year, not just at Christmas. As a result of discussion each member will be responsible for one month and one shut-in.

Mrs. Robert Baker, landscape chairman, reported she is purchasing a tree to replace a dead one previously planted at Keno School.

Mrs. John Parisotto read an article concerning the Nature Trail written by Mrs. Vern Brader, past state garden club president and which was published in the National Gardener magazine.

Mrs. Ray Billings presented the program on narcissus and daffodils.

The next meeting on Nov. 7 at the home of Mrs. Robert Baker, Rte. 3, Box 232 H, will be a workshop to make pine needle baskets with Mrs. Crystal Cheyne as instructor.
