

Doctor Disputes Theory Alcoholism Is Disease

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—A doctor specializing in the treatment of alcoholism today disputed the theory that it is a disease.

Dr. Stephan Seymour, medical director of the Seymour Hospital and Clinic for Alcoholics in Los Angeles, said, "I don't feel alcoholism is a disease. It is an illness only when a person is suffering from acute alcoholism, that is when he has been poisoned by alcohol. But chronic alcoholism is an expression of a person's inability to think."

Seymour, a former Olympic Games athlete, said in an interview that he came to his conclusions "after treating four or five thousand patients."

"I realized that the common denominator among all these patients had been that they had not known how to think," he explained. "They think like children."

"By saying alcoholism is a disease," he continued, "we have put it into a very convenient light so that it becomes excusable and understandable. Saying it is a disease is a wonderful out. The alcoholic says, 'Don't blame me for having a disease.'"

While Seymour conceded that there might be a so-called "X" factor in a person's body chemistry which makes him allergic to alcohol, he said that we blame alcoholism on secondary factors.

"The alcoholic doesn't drink for the pleasure of it," Seymour said. "He uses alcohol to forget his problems and the necessity to solve them. The basic reason an alcoholic drinks is that he is emotionally immature. Mature persons don't turn into alcoholics."

Seymour criticized the research now being done in the field, saying it is concentrated into two areas—study of alcohol and study of emotions.

"The word thinking is never discussed," he complained. "A person can find out the cause of his fears but that doesn't teach him how to think. It doesn't teach him how to handle new problems and new people."

An alcoholic's difficulties often began in childhood, according to Seymour, because parents pass patterns of immature thinking on to their children by their example.

"Problem drinkers are problem thinkers surrounded by a family of problem thinkers," he said.

Seymour believes so strongly in the need for improved thinking habits that he is writing a book on the subject which, he said, is the product of eight years research into the subject.

He also advocated teaching logic in schools.

"We are taught facts, but not how to think," he said.

Fund Cut Delays Earth's Core Study

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A project scientists believe one of the most exciting projects being undertaken by the government may be set back by a year or more because of budget cuts voted by the House Appropriations Committee.

The $68 million Mohole project to study the earth's core was among those that suffered when the committee chopped $266 million from the proposed $389 million budget of the National Science Foundation.

Mohole project funds account for only a small fraction of the total foundation budget for the 1964 fiscal year, which ends next June 30, but it will suffer along with others if the over-all cut stands, a foundation spokesman said Tuesday.

Mohole is a project to drill through the earth's crust to the underlying, little-known mantle, an 1,800-mile deep layer which accounts for five-sixths of the earth's volume.

The plan is to drill through the crust where it is thinnest—at the bottom of the ocean. In places the crust under the sea is believed to be only 3 to 7 miles thick, compared to 18 to 30 miles under the continents.

The drilling platform will ride about 75 feet above the water on six vertical columns extending from twin hulls submerged to a depth of about 70 feet.

The science foundation got $5 million from Congress for Mohole work in the 1963 fiscal year ended June 30. It asked a $10 million increase for this year. The hope has been to complete the project in about four years from now.

The big cut voted by the House committee would hurt the project a foundation spokesman said, and delay its completion by at least a year. He said the stretchout probably also would add to the total cost.

Anti-Toxins Rushed To Treat Victims Of Botulism; Death Toll Reaches Six

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)—Supplies of a scarce anti-toxin were flown from Canada and Denmark today to combat a suspected outbreak of botulism, apparently stemming from packaged smoked fish, that already has claimed six lives.

All of the known supply in the United States of the anti-toxin for the rare "E" type of food poisoning has been brought into use and appeared to be effective in helping eight patients here in Nashville. The anti-toxin was flown here Tuesday by military jet plane from Bethesda, Md.

A special commercial airline flight arrived early today with five pounds of the antidote from the Connaught Medical Center in Toronto, Ont.

Doctors still have been unable to make an ironclad diagnosis in the death here Monday of David Cohen, 35, and his 10-year-old daughter, Amy Beth. The same is true in the death of Nashville Sunday of Mrs. Anna Belle Phelps, 51, and on Sept. 30 of F. W. Pruter, 36. Mr. and Mrs. Chester Mitchell died last Thursday in Kalamazoo, Mich.

The victims all had one thing in common. They had eaten smoked fish from Michigan.

Vanderbilt Hospital officials in Nashville said Tuesday night that Eric Charles Dalton, 5, of Huntsville, Ala., had been admitted to the hospital with apparent symptoms of botulism.

Dr. Richard Cannon, hospital director, quoted the child's mother as saying that Eric had eaten some of the suspected smoked whitefish last Friday.

Cannon said the mother said some of the symptoms had shown up Saturday and had grown progressively worse before he was brought to Vanderbilt.

He said Eric was in a respirator to help fight the paralyzing effect of the poison. Cannon said the boy's condition was listed as critical.
