

'No' Vote Urged To Protest Services And Programs State Can't Afford

Rejection of the ballot measure No. 1 (the income tax bill) by the voters Tuesday will serve to convince legislators and state officers that voters do not favor instigation and maintenance of programs and services the state cannot support economically, William Sweetland told Linkville Kiwanis Club members at their luncheon meeting last week.

In presenting an argument opposed to passage of the measure, Sweetland said:

"A strong case can be made against the tax measure simply because it is a bad bill. This has been acknowledged by what I will refer to here as almost a majority of the legislators. I do not have the record. But my recollection of statements during the closing days of the legislature, and since, is that most of the legislators do not like the proposal, and that many of them voted for it, even though they admit privately that given any other course, they would have chosen a different route in taxation.

"These thoughts come to mind: 'The 1963 income tax act was enacted in an atmosphere of political expediency and bitterness of legislators toward each other instead of what we might term a calm, judicious atmosphere that leads to stable thinking and compromise.

"The governor, who now leads the so-called YES committee as honorary chairman, let the bill become law without signing it, and without comment. It is obvious, however, that he considers the bill deficient.

"While I said before that many legislators voted for the measure, although they declared privately they were against the bill, it is a matter of record that 27 legislators actually voted against the bill, even though the legislature had already approved a budget of some $404 million, and the money had to be found somehow.

"This brings to mind the report of Dr. John F. Sly, director of Princeton Surveys, Princeton University. He was engaged by the legislature in 1957 to study Oregon tax structure and report to the legislature. The report cost $38,000. Dr. Sly warned Oregon that when the general fund budget reached $333 million, that the state must find additional tax sources or the burden on the income and property tax payers would be out of line.

"It might be well to quote some pertinent elements of Dr. Sly's report. He said:

"Oregon will never have to answer the question of a consumer sales tax as an abstract decision. Fiscal pressure will determine it. As long as a state is on a sound and equitable tax base, it is well to avoid the adoption of any new broad-based taxes as long as revenue requirements will permit. The decision becomes basically a matter of expenditure. If budget requirements cannot be met without damaging competitive positions a new base should be accepted. When this time comes in Oregon—and with present spending policies in Oregon it is close—a consumer sales tax will be foremost in legislative thinking.

"In another portion of the report, Dr. Sly commented on disallowing the federal income tax deduction as follows:

"Disallowance of the federal income tax deduction is a source of additional revenue available without raising present taxes or imposing new taxes. This is true but it is an argument weighted strongly on the side of tax expediency.

"In his proposed tax program for Oregon Dr. Sly gave four alternatives and said:

"If Oregon is to maintain a favorable tax position with competitive states it must accept for the time being (1) a restraint on spending programs; (2) a restraint on additional revenues from its income tax bases; (3) a restraint on expenditures from its property taxes.

"If additional revenues are required for the ensuing biennium—and they will be—Oregon must choose from (1) new excise taxes; (2) new bases in its income taxes; and (3) a consumer sales tax—or a combination of these.

"It is reasonable to assume that if the measure is successful, some (or all) members of the legislature will grasp that result as a 'mandate' to go on and on spending more money than we have, for programs we need less and less. Certainly, there has been little indication that we can expect the legislators to adopt programs that will cut back in state expenditures.

"The argument is made that, percentage-wise, the 1963 legislature provided for less of an increase than in the previous biennium. And, percentage-wise, that is true. Nevertheless, it was an increase of some 10 per cent. And one must consider that the higher the budget goes each biennium, the less of a percentage increase is needed to provide substantial dollar increases in those budgets. And it is tax dollars we are talking about—not percentages.

"Now to the less desirable features of HB 1846. There appear to be two principal points. One is the elimination of the federal income tax deduction, and the other is the feature that imposes an additional tax burden on the wage earner who has a large family, while reducing the burden on single person taxpayers.

"The reasoning here is obvious. In one instance, we are imposing a tax on income the taxpayer never received—never even had a chance to let the money run through his fingers. I believe Oregon voters turned this down once before, if that has any significance at this time. In the other instance, we are imposing additional tax burdens on a great many parents who are already finding it almost impossible to make ends meet.

"I think the bill should have carried with it a sales tax or a higher net receipts tax. Dr. Sly contended that the state would have fiscal problems when the general fund budget reached $333 million dollars unless we provided for a sales tax. We now have a general budget of 404 million dollars, and we're in trouble.

"Maybe we can accept this present tax bill. But the real problem is: are we going to do the same thing—that is tax the same group of people additionally at the next session to again meet increased revenue needs? And we know there will be increases if the present trend prevails.

"I don't want to get in a big hassle with the educators. They have problems enough, and so have I. But, on an economy based largely on agriculture and timber products we are operating an educational system that has one of the highest per pupil costs in the nation—over $500.

"The 1963-1965 general fund budget for education alone is 234 million dollars. The combined collections of 1961-1963 biennium in personal income, corporation income and excise taxes was approximately 233 million.

"I believe the legislature should be studying ways to cut income taxes rather than increasing them. This might be a factor in inducing more industry to come into the state. We should also reduce property taxes which are now confiscatory.

"Unless we have a sales tax or net receipts tax coupled with a reduction of income and property taxes we have no alternative, think, other than to drastically cut the general fund budget.

"As far as education programs are concerned, I think all of us share a sympathetic attitude toward the objectives of the edu-

But it is not a disservice, I think, to implement only those areas we find economically feasible as we go along. One could ask if it is a desirable objective, for instance, for the state to provide 50 per cent of the cost of education through the basic school fund at the local level. Also, is the objective of elementary education of a new pupil to teacher ratio of 25-1 (feasible)? Higher education in 1963-67 is going to have a tougher time than now experienced, we are told. Isn't it reasonable to conclude that increasing costs of education will continue to make greater demands on the restricted group of taxpayers we now have in the income and property tax areas?

"Substantial arguments are advanced for increases in public welfare and other state services. However, I think a substantial 'NO' vote Oct. 15 will convince legislators and state officers that these programs are not deemed so essential.

"The argument is made that if the tax measure is defeated at the polls, property taxes will go up. This is possible. But, only if taxpayers in the various taxing districts are willing for that to happen. By that I mean that if any tax district such as a school is to seek additional funds for operation it would have to go to the voters in any instance where the increase exceeded 6 per cent of the previous tax base. So the voters do have control of programs where property tax increases are the basis of financing for those programs. This is not true when we consider state aid to the schools under the basic support program. It is the acknowledged aim of educators and administrators—particularly the Oregon Education Association for the state to provide at least 50 per cent of school costs through the basic school program.

"Some people call attention to Oregon's favorable per capita tax rating, as compared with other states. But this argument does not hold up when one considers that only 65 per cent of the people in Oregon provide the bulk of the tax money.

"Nor am I convinced that we are getting all of the information we need on this issue. For instance, why doesn't the governor's office explain that there are some $25 million dollars in surplus dedicated funds that could be used in a financial emergency if one develops when the referral is successful. The legislature could be called back into session and cut back on some of the programs. Surely a large number of legislators had this in mind when they made provision for the money to pay for the Oct. 15 election before they adjourned.

Summing up the arguments for voting 'NO' on the issue we find:

1. The measure bears most heavily on those least able to pay—the lower income citizens.
2. The law does not go far enough in distributing the costs of government among the whole population. A sales tax would do this.
3. We do not need a tax increase of any kind; or at least only in a limited amount. Government should economize as we all must when faced with difficult economic problems.
4. The measure embodies a tax on a tax because it does not allow the deduction of federal income taxes.
5. We can defer some of the programs outlined for implementation during this biennium.
6. Rejection of the measure by the voters will serve to convince legislators and state officers that we do not favor instigation of programs and services we are not in a position to pay for.

"Another argument—although admittedly not having anything to do with the merits of the bill itself, is the evident pressure that is being exerted for passage of the bill is a source of irritation and annoyance. One cannot help but wonder where all the money comes from for the 'Good of YES' propaganda that crosses our desks. Postage, paper and handling of all of this material must call for a staggering amount of expenditure. Much of this material is coming from the state offices and institutions that claim it is not possible for them to cut budgets, manpower and capital outlay. But this frenzied activity cannot help but produce some wonder."

"There is a way we could conceivably bring about a change of some $61,000,000 in the budget and expenditure picture that would remove the necessity for new taxes in this biennium," Sweetland pointed out.

"We could (through legislative action) cut $15,000,000 from the basic school aid program. We could cut about $5,000,000 from the proposed increases in state salaries; and we could cut about $11,000,000 from the construction program. Add to this the approximate $25,000,000 in dedicated and special funds available and you have about $61,000,000 in funds or budget slashes to assist in balancing the budget.

"This might be an oversimplification to solution of the problem, but it does point a way in which we can achieve fiscal responsibility," he concluded.
