

Former 'Life With Father' Star Joins 'Mr. Ed'

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Leon Ames, the choleric Clarence Day of video's bygone "Life With Father," has been chosen to play a short-tused retired Army colonel on the "Mr. Ed" series, replacing the late Larry Keating.

An old warhorse of a character actor, Ames will wage his own warfare against the unfortunate Mr. Ed, equine star of the show.

Between "Life With Father" and his new assignment, Ames starred in a little bomb titled "Father of the Bride" which survived less than a year on the air.

Ames is an enormously wealthy man, owning one of the largest automobile agencies in the West. Additionally, he continues to reap residuals from "Life With Father." Inasmuch as he doesn't need the money, Ames' new role is merely an opportunity to satisfy the inner ham. A fact he cheerfully admits.

"This part fits in fine with my plans," he said, prior to reporting for his first day's work.

"Alan Young (who co-stars) is an old friend of mine. And we work on the same lot (General Services Studios) where I did 'Life With Father.' And I can be home every night for dinner."

"I'm overpaid, fat and getting old, and I couldn't ask for anything better."

Ames, looking many years younger than his near-60 years, has only one sincere regret about his new assignment. "I'm terribly sorry the job came along as it did because Larry Keating and I were good friends," he said. "We worked together 30 years ago in Wheeling, W.Va., in a stock company. "He was a mighty fine actor. It won't be easy filling his shoes."

Ames will have a new television wife in the series, but an actress has not yet been selected. There has been serious lobbying around the network and with producer Arthur Lubin to land Laraine Tuttle for the role. Televiewers will remember Miss Tuttle as the long-suffering Mrs. Day on Ames' first series.

Poor-Pay 'Burke's Law' Has Guest Stars Waiting

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—The new chic rage among stars today is appearing in a new television show for comparative peanuts. The show is "Burke's Law."

A new tongue-in-cheek detective series that features big names in bit parts. Almost all the minor roles are filled by stars who outshine the regular leading man, Gene Barry.

In a recently filmed segment the supporting cast included David Niven, Ida Lupino, Cesar Romero, Tina Louise, Howard Duff, Nick Adams, Laraine Day, Phil Harris, Tom Tully and Elaine Stewart.

Each was paid only $1,000.

Many a star demands $15,000 and up for appearances in guest spots, but producer Aaron Spelling pays one and all a flat $1,000 a day, take it or leave it. And the takers are standing in line.

Why has "Burke's Law" become an "in" thing to do? And how can Spelling lure the stars to work for such grubby wages?

"Simple," says Spelling. "We give them an opportunity to play roles they never get a chance to play anywhere else. We even call them and ask them what kind of character they'd like to do; then we write a part to suit them."

"For instance, we gave lady-like Dina Merrill the chance to play a prostitute. Dancer Juliet Prowse plays a gal who gets kicked out of a chorus line because she can't dance. Dana Wynter plays a nymphomaniac."

Most of the stars work only a single day. But they are habied with flowers, champagne and caviar sent to their homes. If they like, a Rolls Royce is sent to pick them up for work.

Another cast of character actors for a single segment includes John Ireland, Burgess Meredith, Diana Dors, Suzy Parker, Jan Sterling, Arlene Dahl and Sammy Davis Jr.

GUESS WHO? — Martha Raye isn't quite sure whether that is Yul Brynner or Bob Hope in a costume for a sketch which will be seen on the "Comedy Special" on NBC-TV next Friday night. In case you have guessed, it's Bob. — UPI Telephoto
