

Criminal Cases Move Faster Than Civil Actions In County's Courts

The median criminal case in Klamath County's Circuit Courts was tried within two months after charges were filed during 1962, but the median civil case was 11 months old when it came to trial.

These figures are contained in the ninth annual report on the activities of Oregon's Circuit and District courts prepared by the State Supreme Court. The report was released this week by the Supreme Court.

In his foreword, Chief Justice William M. McAllister said the condition of a court's docket is "best measured by the length of the time elapsing from the filing of the average case to its termination by trial."

Justice McAllister congratulated 18 counties for disposing of its average civil case within six months from the filing date and said this average should be the standard in all courts.

Another 18 counties were noted for reducing the number of civil cases pending more than two years to less than five per cent of the number of all civil cases pending. Klamath County was on neither of these lists, but Lake County was included on the first list by McAllister.

In closing, Justice McAllister said: "Since 1960 there has been a marked improvement in the condition of the dockets of the trial courts in Oregon. With few exceptions the dockets are now in excellent condition and justice is being administered without delay. The circuit judges of the state deserve full credit for that achievement."

Figures in the report are expressed in medians instead of averages.

The median case is the middle case in a series which is arranged in numerical order from the lowest to the highest, whereas the average is the sum divided by the number of cases.

The report says 39 criminal cases were tried in Klamath County's Circuit Courts. The youngest was one month old and the oldest 16 months old, with the median being two months.

Tillamook County had the youngest median — 0.5 months old — and Columbia County had the oldest — seven months old.

Six counties had one-month medians, three had 1.5-month medians and five others with Klamath had two-month medians.

Lake County tried only one criminal case during the year, which was 3.5 months old, giving it a median of 3.5.

Overall, 676 criminal cases were tried in Circuit Courts in Oregon during the year.

Klamath County's Circuit Courts tried 82 civil cases during the year and the median civil case was 11 months old. Only three counties — Sherman, Jefferson and Lincoln — had higher medians.

The youngest civil case tried in Klamath County was one month old and the oldest 146 months old.

Lake County's median civil case was five months old and in all five civil cases were tried in the county during the year.

Overall, 3,068 civil cases were tried in the state during 1962.

Klamath County ranks 33rd in the 36 counties in percentage of civil cases pending for more than two years.

On Dec. 31, 1963, 645 cases were pending in the county, 105 of which were more than two years old. This is 16.3 per cent.

Lake County ranked 23rd with 8.6 per cent.

Figures in the Supreme Court report indicate a substantial increase in the percentage of civil cases pending more than two years during 1962. At the end of 1961, 6.5 per cent of Klamath's civil cases pending were two years old, but this percentage rose to 16.3 in 1962.

Overall in the state, however, the percentages have been decreasing in the last four years.

The Klamath Judicial District, which is composed of just Klamath County, fought a losing battle during 1962 in the termination of all cases.

Although the two Klamath judges, Donald A. W. Piper and David R. Vandenberg, were able to terminate 630 cases during the year, 666 in all were filed, increasing the number of cases pending at the end of the year by 36.

In the rest of the state, the number of cases pending at the end of the year was reduced by 700 during the year.

During 1962, outside judges gave 30 days of help to Klamath County Circuit Courts and Klamath judges gave nine days to other districts.

During the year, each judge in Klamath County tried an average of 57.6 cases. Multnomah County had the highest average case load — 94.1 — and Lake County had the lowest — 6 per judge — in districts having both juvenile and probate jurisdiction.

With 666 cases of all types filed during the year, there were 333 cases filed per judge in Klamath County.

The report indicates that the total number of cases filed during the year dropped in 1962 to 666 from 733 in 1961. Previous to 1961, the number of cases filed had risen steadily.

Meanwhile, 6,589 cases of all types were filed in Klamath District Court during 1962 and 5,991 were terminated. Of these totals, 5,052 criminal cases were filed and 4,680 were terminated.
