

Young World Traveler To Boost UN Week Here

Cindy Harless occupied Gov. Mark Hatfield's chair at the last session of Girls' State. She may never be officially governor of any state, but everyone who works closely with her predicts she's going places.

Actually, the amazingly poised 17-year-old Henley High School senior has possibly already been more places than the governor whose position she filled temporarily. And everywhere her travels have taken her, she has taken honors.

As winner in the IOOF-sponsored speech and essay contest here last March, Cindy went in July with other winners from Oregon, Washington and British Columbia on a month-long tour across the country — destination — the United Nations in New York.

Her experiences there and her insight from personal knowledge into the problems of other nations particularly qualify her as featured speaker before various civic clubs here during United Nations Week, Oct. 20-26. Cindy's dark eyes grow serious as she says she has learned that virtue does not belong to any one nation, alone. She will enlarge on her observation and give her candid impression of her U.N. experiences and important public figures whom she met.

Cindy was born in El Reno, Okla., and by the time she was 3 was living in Germany and on her way to becoming a world citizen. Her father is Capt. B. L. Harless, presently of Kingsley Field, and the family home has always been on an Air Force base somewhere. They have been stationed in many states, several times in Florida, but most often in the Southwest. This is the first time in the Northwest. Cindy says she was proud because Oregon took the majority of student government honors in New York.

The home Cindy remembers most vividly and most happily is Okinawa where the Harlesses lived from 1956 to 1960. There she attended school with students from many lands—Pakistan, India, China, Japan. She speaks affectionately of her little Japanese friend, Tomiko, and still has Japanese pen pals, some now attending the University of Tokyo.

Cindy loves to swim and on Okinawa that was possible about 10 months of the year. She was selected from her school to make a trip to Nikko, Japan, for a Red Cross leadership course. During the training course, Japanese and American girls were roommates; playing, learning, living together.

Mrs. Uyvela Harless, attractive as her sparkling daughter, says she has encouraged Cindy and 15-year-old son, Steve, to participate in community activities wherever they've been because they've had little opportunity to grow deep roots. Apparently Mrs. Harless' philosophy is good. Cindy's teachers report that she ranks at the top of her class scholastically and is popular among the other students. Steve is doing equally well.

As the Harless family hopes its next assignment may be in Europe, Cindy thoughtfully evaluates possible universities for next fall. Her anticipated major? Political Science!

Ross Ragland, the first president of the Klamath Chapter of the United Nations Association and Cindy's current sponsor, has scheduled an ambitious week of appearances for her. Cindy's first talk will be before the Business and Professional Women's Club Monday night; Tuesday noon, Lions Club; Wednesday noon, Linkville Kiwanis; Wednesday night, Toketeo Lions; Thursday noon, Kiwanis Club; Friday noon, Rotary Club, and Friday afternoon, she will appear on television.

Defensive Gem Noted

By OSWALD JACOBY
 Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Here is a little gem from "Winning Defense." South ducks the first heart and wins the second in dummy. Then he plays a low club and East should rise with his king. It won't do him any real good to hang on to it and if West has the ace of clubs the play of the king will allow him to save it as a later entry for the heart suit.

If East doesn't play the king it is still possible to defeat the contract. But a lot of defense is necessary.

To start, West must hold back his ace. A second club lead will knock out East's king and East will return his last heart. South will take his ace and lead his queen of diamonds for a finesse. East will be in with the king and have no better play than a diamond return.

Dummy will cash three diamond tricks. East will follow suit while South will discard either two clubs or a spade and a club. It doesn't actually matter. However, West's one discard is most important. He is looking at two rather little spades, a couple of good hearts and the ace of clubs and if he is careless and throws away one of those spades he will give South the hand. Instead, he should discard a heart.

Now South leads a spade to his king and East must play carefully. He must play either the nine or ten of spades—not the five spot. Finally, South leads a second spade and you can see why it was important for West to have one left. He plays the eight of spades and if South ducks in dummy that eight will hold the trick.

 What do you do?
 A—Bid four hearts. You are trapping your partner, but obviously he is very short in diamonds and all your high cards will be helpful to him.

TODAY'S QUESTION
 You hold the same hand. Your partner redoubles West's double of your diamond opening. East passes. What do you do now?

NEW OTI CAMPUS — Overall photo shows activity at the site of the new Oregon Technical Institute campus northeast of Klamath Falls. In foreground, workmen are beginning the new dormitory. OTI is expected to move into the new campus next year. Two classroom buildings have already been completed. Near the campus site is the site of the new Intercommunity Presbyterian Hospital. The public will tour the OTI campus site next weekend during Homecoming.

OTI ADMINISTRATION — This building being raised on concrete pedestals will be the administration center of the new OTI campus. The building is typical of the architecture found in the new campus.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION — Framed in the covered walkway of a nearly completed classroom building, the new OTI physical education building is visible in the background. The four towers will contain stairways leading to the upstairs gymnasium. Under the gym, there will be offices and classrooms.

4-H Urges New Clubs

"Organization" and "re-organization" are the two busy words on the 4-H slate for October.

Beverly Wischnofski and Francis Skinner, county 4-H agents announce that students 9-21 years old by Jan. 1 who are interested in club work should contact the 4-H community leader in their school community or call the county extension office for information.

Distribution of "4-H Invites You" folders to the various schools in the county has resulted in greater numbers of interested students than present clubs can accommodate. As the 4-H program cannot function without the aid of volunteer adult leaders, the services of interested adults is urgently needed.

The project - basis 4-H youth education program is offered in the following areas: Animal science, plant science, natural science, mechanics, business and marketing, personal development, creative arts and home economics. Specific projects are available in each project area.

Although 4-H community leader assignments have not been completed for all communities in the county, the following are announced: Bly, Mrs. Lawrence Little; Bonanza, Mrs. William Drew; Crescent-Gilechrist, Mrs. Harry Dan; Fairhaven, Mrs. Jack Brandon; Ferguson, Mrs. Hubert Vanderhoff; Henley, Mrs. Harold Campbell; Keno, Mrs. James Hopkins; Langell Valley, Mrs. Howery Roberts; Merrill, Mrs. Charles Cunningham; Peterson, Mrs. Robert Kennedy; Poe Valley, Mrs. William Tubach and Sprague River, Mrs. Joe Lahoda.

GETS RED MISSILE AID

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — A Defense Ministry spokesman said Saturday that India would manufacture guided missiles with Soviet collaboration for Mig jet fighter planes it expected to produce within two years. The spokesman said the original Mig contract with Russia provided for manufacture of all components, including air-to-air missiles. The missiles, he said, will be turned out in a factory in Hyderabad.

Demo Says Elephant Bones Must Go

CHICAGO (UPI) — There's been no peace for U.S. District Court Judge Joseph Sam Perry, once known as Illinois' "Mr. Democrat," since they unearthed from his back yard the remnants of a prehistoric elephant.

"I was county chairman of the Democratic party; I was Democratic circuit judge; I used to be called 'Mr. Democrat' while in the Illinois legislature, and now this has to happen to me," Perry quipped. The state's staunchest Republicans couldn't ask for a better model for their perennial emblem than the one found on Perry's suburban Glen Ellyn estate.

It all started innocently enough when Perry asked workers to enlarge the pond on his property. Shortly afterward, one of the workers came staggering up the path to Perry's house with the giant bone in his grasp.
