

BLM Reports Transfers Of Lakeview Personnel

LAKEVIEW—Charles "Chick" Sullaway, administrative assistant on the Lakeview district of the Bureau of Land Management, has transferred to the position of fire control officer on the district, with the change effective Oct. 14. He was on his former job for the past six years.

James L. Johnston has transferred here from Ashland to fill the vacancy, according to an announcement by George Lea, district manager. Johnston is a veteran of the Army and Air Force, from which he retired in October, 1959. He joined the BLM at Vale and after two years went to Ashland to take another year of college work.

He has been active in Boy Scout work.

The transfer of Malcolm "Bud" Shrode to the Vale district of the Bureau of Land Management also has been announced by Lea. The move was effective Oct. 18.

Shrode has been a range manager with the Lakeview district for the past five years and will be in charge of range management on the central division of the Vale district at Jordan Valley.

A certificate of outstanding performance of duty was granted to him last year by the BLM. He has also been active with the local Jaycees, as a charter member in 1959 and past president of the group.

Both Sides Present Views Alturas At Hearing On Dismissal Of Teacher

ALTURAS — Hearings were closed Thursday afternoon, Oct. 17, by the Alturas Elementary School Board of Trustees on an appeal of teacher Max Hess contesting his dismissal at the close of the school year last spring.

In refusing to renew Hess' contract, Principal Marshall McCuniff had stated that it was on six points: 1. Inability and failure of the teacher to accept "suggestions" when these are consistent with the accepted education practice. 2. Inability to cooperate with teachers and principal. 3. Poor judgment in handling student disciplinary problems and lack of proper self control in disciplining pupils and in the presence of pupils. 4. Lack of proper organization of time, classroom procedure, and teaching materials. 5. Failure to accept and comply with the rules, policies, and proceedings and regulations of the school district. 6. Insubordination.

stated that Hess was not cooperative with the staff members and at times had used abusive language to members of the staff, causing concern and confusion within the staff.

McCuniff said Hess used poor disciplinary measures with the students and at one time sent a student to stand in the rain without coat or hat. He also stated that Hess used a demerit system in his class which was recorded by a student and caused considerable controversy among the students concerning the accuracy of the records and the appropriateness of the penalties invoked.

One witness testified that during a ball game between Alturas and the South Fork School, Hess had become violently abusive toward one or more of the adults from the South Fork team. He accused them of infractions of "rules of sportsmanship" and called one person an "old coot."

McCuniff stated that Hess lacked proper organization in the classroom and was often out of the classroom during class hours. Students took advantage of the laxity and often were wandering out of the classroom on errands for long periods of time.

The board has stated they will make no decision on Hess' appeal until after they have read and studied the transcript of the proceedings.
