

Court Ruling Upsets California

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California was on the horns of a dilemma today because of the Supreme Court's refusal to grant a rehearing in the Colorado River water case.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown, never a pessimist, issued a statement whose essence was that things could have been worse.

William E. Warne, director of water resources, agreed by saying "Yes, indeed, we've got real problems."

The federal court, in its decision this morning, actually reaffirmed its action of June 3 in which it divided up the water of the Colorado in a way that left Southern California's Metropolitan Water District about 1.2 million acre-feet short of its requirements.

"The state's immediate problem is to augment the California water project to make up for nearly one million acre-feet of Colorado River water which can no longer be counted as part of Southern California's basic supply," Brown said.

However, the cost of collecting and pumping this additional water into Southern California would be enormous. Warne estimated that it would run to $887 million.

This is not a happy prospect for the Brown administration, which is already under fire from critics who charge that the California water plan is exceeding costs promised by the governor when he campaigned for the plan's approval in 1960.

Interior Secretary Stewart Udall last August offered California an escape. His five-state Pacific Southwest water plan would bring the 1.2 million acre-feet into Southern California at federal expense.

But in addition, he wants another 1.2 million acre-feet of Northern California water for the desert regions of Arizona.

While few persons in California doubt that this state can supply Udall's requirements, and then some, the problem again is one of cost.

School Bus Laws Noted

Yellow school buses, filled with students, books and noise, are again a familiar sight to Oregon drivers. But as familiar as drivers may be with the sight of the school bus, many drivers are not familiar with the laws relating to the stopped and loading bus.

Just what is the procedure when meeting or passing a stopped school bus?

The Traffic Safety Division of the Department of Motor Vehicles breaks the "School Bus Stop Law" into two situations. One section of the law applies when traveling on a two or three-lane street. If the school bus is stopped and has its red warning lights flashing, all drivers traveling in both directions must stop. The "stop lines" for cars meeting and passing the bus are imaginary lines drawn across the road from the back and front bumper of the bus.

A different situation applies when traveling on a street with two or more lanes in each direction. In this situation only the cars going in the same direction as the bus must stop. Vehicles traveling in the opposite direction of the bus may proceed.

In both situations, drivers must stop only when, and as long as, the bus's red warning lights are flashing. If they are not flashing, the driver may pass the bus with caution.

Girl Scouts Set Roundup Site

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — The Girl Scouts of America will hold their 1963 senior roundup at the foot of the Bitterroot Mountains at the Farragut Wildlife Area near Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, it was announced here today.

The roundup site selection was made by the national board of directors of the Girl Scouts during their annual convention here.

The 1963 roundup, expected to draw about 10,000 Girl Scouts from around the nation, will be held July 15-22.

'Diploma Mill'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Frank E. Stranges, 43-year-old president of International Evangelism Crusaders Inc., was convicted Monday of operating a "mail order diploma mill" that issued honorary doctor of divinity degrees for $25 each.

Municipal Judge Kenneth Holiday set Nov. 12 for sentencing after finding Stranges guilty of operating without a city license
