Healthy Palmer Seeking Elusive Crown; U.S. Team Made Favorite

By LEO H. PETERSEN
UPI Sports Editor

PARIS (UPI) — A healthy but tired Arnold Palmer went out today in quest of one of the two major golf titles he never has won — the individual championship in the Canada Cup and International Golf Association matches.

Teamed with Jack Nicklaus, the United States team was a top heavy favorite to win the team title. Palmer and Nicklaus also were the choices to battle it out for the individual championship as 66 golfers from 33 nations teed off in the 11th annual IGA championship.

"There are two championships I want to win that I haven't," Palmer said. "This is one of them. The other is the PGA."

Palmer, golf's all-time money winner, has won all of the other major titles the sport has to offer. This will be his third shot in this international competition. He teamed with the veteran Sam Snead to win the Canada Cup — which goes to the victorius team — in 1960 and again last year.

Finished Third

In the individual race, he finished third in 1960 when Flory Van Donck of Belgium won and last year at Buenos Aires he tied Snead for second place when Robert De Vicenzo of Argentina won.

Although Palmer and Nicklaus were rated as the ones to beat for both championships, Palmer wasn't that optimistic.

"You have at least eight other teams here who could win the team championship and at least a dozen golfers who could take the individual title," he warned. "If they are saying Jack and I have a lock on both titles, they are dead wrong.

"Anything can happen in this game and when you get a strongly matched field like this one, I don't see how you can pick out any team or individual as a favorite."

Tired From Travel

Palmer admitted he was tired from all his airplane travel and had not yet adjusted to the new sleeping and eating hours but was happy because he no longer is bothered by bursitis in his right shoulder.

He and Nicklaus tee off today at 12:10 p.m. — 7:10 p.m. EDT—playing with the French team of Jean Garaialde and Jean-Claude Harismendy.

LOCAL ACTION — A.3.C. Tom Kessinger (left) and A.2.C. Tony Dematta, two former Golden Gloves competitors, will be appearing in the featured event at a boxing show at the Kingsley Field base gym Friday at 7:30 p.m. The boxing card for the evening will feature 10 events. The public is invited, and all proceeds of the event will be donated to the United Fund. Admission is 50 cents.

The 'Ugly Duckling' Now Enjoys Last Laugh—With 50G Contract

NEW YORK (UPI) — Yogi Berra has the last laugh today.

Once the ugly duckling of baseball who as a young player was ridiculed and taunted by players with half his ability, the 38-year-old Berra will be officially designated as the new manager of the New York Yankees.

An open secret since Ralph Houk succeeded to the general manager's chair on Tuesday, the formal announcement will be made by club President Dan Topping at noon (EDT) during a press conference at the Savoy-Hilton Hotel.

Berra's salary is expected to be $50,000 a year — 100 times what he received when he signed his first contract with the organization in 1943.

Then Berra — a far cry from the shy kid who told St. Louis fans honoring him with a "night" in 1947: "I want to thank everybody who made this night necessary" — will take the microphone and outline his plans for rallying the Yankees from their four-straight disaster at the hands of the Los Angeles Dodgers in the World Series.

Berra is expected to reveal that he rejected several managerial offers from other clubs because he had been tipped by the front office that he was to become the new manager of the Yankees.

The official announcement of Berra's appointment will cap a career which started on the sandlots of St. Louis.

Born on the "Hill" in St. Louis on May 12, 1925, Berra took naturally to athletics and played hockey and football as well as baseball. His natural sport was baseball, however, and he entered the Yankees' farm system in 1943 when he signed with Norfolk in the Piedmont League.

After spending 1944 and 1945 in the Coast Guard — he went ashore on Normandy Beach in the invasion of Western Europe —Berra was moved to the Yankees' International League farm club in Newark. He played seven games at the close of the 1946 season and reported the next spring to Manager Bucky Harris a serious candidate for a regular job.

Although ridiculed at first because of his linguistic and parlor-room faults, Berra's exceptional batting ability and his inherent instinct to make the right move on the field quickly established him as a big league star.

Howe Tries For Record

DETROIT (UPI) — All eyes will be on Gordie Howe tonight when the Detroit Red Wings take the ice against the Chicago Black Hawks at Olympia Stadium.

The veteran right winger, who has recently been bothered by a bruised ankle which is recovering, will be shooting for one of the milestone records of the National Hockey League.

Howe will be looking for his 544th NHL regular season goal which will tie him with the former Montreal great, Maurice, the Rocket, Richard.

The winner of tonight's game will decide first place in the NHL. Chicago leads with four victories and one defeat while Detroit is tied for second with Toronto with identical 3-2 records. The Maple Leafs are idle tonight.

Howe would already have the record, but two of his goals scored this season were disallowed on a ruling and a penalty.

The 35-year-old native of Floral, Saskatchewan has had a long and colorful career with the Wings. He has already scored more points and assists and played in more games than any other player in history.

Howe has been awarded the Hart Trophy, for the most valuable player and the Ross Trophy, given to the leading scorer, six times each for another record total.

Baseball Plastic Covers Turf As Webfoots Given Slight Nod

PORTLAND (UPI) — There are at least four things bugging Oregon about its football game with Washington here Saturday.

Namely:

The weather.

Oregon is favored.

Rick Redman.

Junior Coffey.

Item one—weather. Oregon has a speedboy backfield that needs a dry turf to function at its best. And Multnomah Stadium is not exactly known for sure footing, even without rain. It's rained most of the week—more is predicted. Oregon's plastic baseball cover was shipped up from Eugene today to help cover the field.

Item two—favored. This is something that hasn't happened to Oregon in a game with Washington since 1954. Odds makers have made the Webfoots a three-point choice. No one likes to be favored in this one—but Oregon can take some consolation. It won in 1954—26-7.

Item three—Redman. This guy just can't be human, say rivals. The best guard in the country, say many opposing coaches. To score, the Webfoots have to get by him. He also does a tremendous job of punting.

Item four—Coffey: This is the great unknown. Is the big fullback really in shape after only four plays all season—those against Stanford last week?

If he is he could be the deciding factor on a wet field.

Of course, Oregon has a few things going for it, too. Like a four-game winning streak, an All-American named Mel Renfro, one of the sharpest quarterbacks in the country in Bob Berry, and some pretty fair linemen — including John Wilcox, a tough 230-pound guard who could give even Redman a bad afternoon.

This is the game that tests the durability of ancient Multnomah Stadium. The crowd figures to be at least 35,000, no matter what the weather. And thousands more will be seated in Memorial Coliseum watching the game on closed-circuit television at $2 a throw.

Washington, although only 2-3 for the season, is 1-0 in the Big Six—and has Rose Bowl hopes—especially if it gets by Southern Cal next week. But the Huskies won't be pointing for that one here. This is the prestige game of the Pacific Northwest.

The last four games between these rivals have seen Washington score 47 points and Oregon 46. Washington won twice, Oregon edged the Huskies 7-6 here in 1961 and last year's Seattle game ended in a wild 21-21 tie. That one is remembered as the contest which saw Washington fans pour into the end zone on the game's final play to help break up a desperate, long Oregon pass for a winning TD.

Jackson, Hood Top OCC Stars

PORTLAND (UPI) — Mike Hood, who gained 168 yards in 16 carries and scored two touchdowns for Southern Oregon Saturday was named Oregon Collegiate Conference back of the week today.

Hood was a standout in the Red Raiders' 29-14 win over Oregon Tech.

Lineman of the week honors went to end Steve Jackson of Oregon College of Education. He caught six passes for 124 yards in OCE's 21-13 win over Eastern Oregon.

Conference statistics show Frank Ellis of OCE as the rushing leader with 376 yards.

Oregon Tech's Mike Glines took over the passing lead this week with 49 completions in 106 attempts for 578 yards.

Gal Money Winners Start Golf Classic

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — All the top money winners, including record-breaking Mickey Wright, were among the 39 golfers who started play today in the 72-hole, $11,000 Thunderbird Ladies Open golf tournament.

Miss Wright, who has won an all-time high of $27,600 this year, and Kathy Whitworth, defending champion and second leading money winner, were the favorites as usual.

Other top contenders were expected to be Marilyn Smith, who has been having her best year; USGA Women's Open champion Mary Mills; veterans Louise Suggs and Jackie Pung and newcomer Clifford Ann Creed.

The 72-hole tournament, which will end Sunday, was being played over the short (6,372 yards) Arizona Biltmore course. Par is 72.

COYOTE REGULAR — Ex-Bonanza standout Jim O'Connor is currently in his fourth year with the College of Idaho Coyote grid club as a starting wingback on Babe Brown's team. O'Connor will graduate next spring and will enter the teaching and coaching field.

Ex-Antler Starter For C Of I Eleven

Jim O'Connor, former Bonanza High School football star, is playing his fourth season at the College of Idaho as the starting wingback on Coach Babe Brown's Fly-T offense. O'Connor has been a durable performer for the Coyotes, especially during the past two seasons when he earned his spurs as a starter in the backfield. O'Connor also performs the kickoff and extra point duties for the Coyotes and he has established himself as one of the finest extra point specialists in the Northwest Conference.

O'Connor is a compact 160-pounder who has developed into one of the better running backs in the league. He has been cited as a capable pass receiver and is one of the better competitors in small college football. He has also played baseball during his first two seasons at the College of Idaho, and last spring was on the track team. Before the season was over he had established himself as the No. 1 pole vaulter on the Coyote cinder team.

He will graduate next May with a major in physical education and expects to pursue a teaching and coaching career.

Rooks Face Frosh In Annual Tilt

EUGENE (UPI) — Oregon's Frosh football team meets the Oregon State Rooks here Friday.

The Frosh won their opener against Washington State 24-19. Starting in the backfield for the Frosh will be Tom Jernstedt of Carlton at quarterback. Tim Temple of Pendleton and Phil Johnson of Livermore, Calif., at half and Doug Giles of Bandon at fullback.

AN UNBEATABLE 'GORILLA' . . .

Former Boxing Great Pegs Current Champ

By OSCAR FRALEY
UPI Sports Writer

PARIS (UPI) — Georges Carpentier, a boxing legend in France, today labeled heavyweight champion Charles (Sonny) Liston an unbeatable "gorilla."

"They have always said if you could teach a gorilla to fight he would be the greatest of all time," analyzed Carpentier. "Without meaning to insult Liston, from what I have seen he comes closest of any boxer I have ever known to fitting that description."

The tall, dapper Carpentier, wearing his 69 years lightly, in looking back at the past said he regarded Jack Dempsey as the greatest of all previous champions and asserted that Dempsey in his prime would have knocked out Gene Tunney with relative ease.

Nicknamed The Orchid Man

He speaks with authority, this handsome stalwart with the iron gray hair who was known as the "Orchid Man." Because after winning the world's light heavyweight championship from battling Levnsky he was almost at the end of his career when Tunney knocked him out in the 15th round.

But the fight which stands out most vividly in his mind is the one in which he and Dempsey drew the first million dollar gate at Boyle's 30 acres in Jersey City in 1921.

"My, how he could hit," Carpentier said reflectively rubbing his long, jutting chin as he recalled his own knockout.

"I wasn't built to be a fighter," said the man who was a product of the French mining country and now runs a successful restaurant in the heart of Paris. "My arms were too short. Not anything like Liston's. However, I had good legs and a good punch."

While the boxing history books regard Carpentier's venture against Dempsey as a definite mismatch, Carpentier still holds that he thought he had a good chance against the Manassa Mauler.

Weight Padded

"I figured that if I hit him, I could put him away," he said in his slow, precise manner of speaking. "But actually, I guess I was too small."

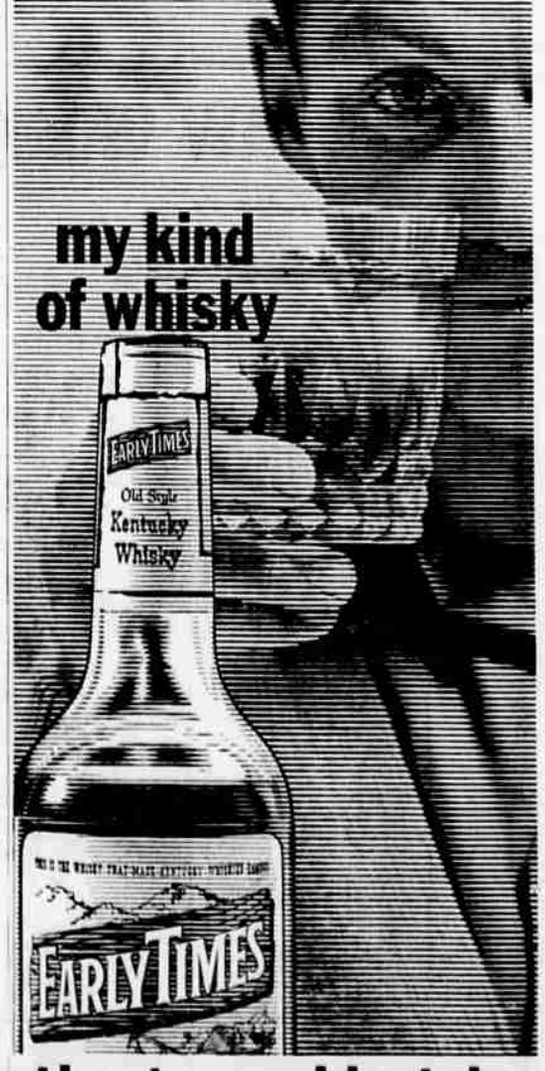
In boxing, faces may change but, it is apparent, methods alter little. Because Carpentier smilingly revealed that in his fight with the 188-pound Dempsey his own announced weight was padded to make the bout appear more even.

"They announced my weight as 172 pounds," he said with amusement. "Actually I weighed 163 pounds. The 20 pound difference was too much."

It was. Dempsey flattened him in four rounds.

Carpentier admits to being saddened at the international "death" of boxing.

"It is dying all over," he said. "It is a thing of many factors. You have to be born a fighter. Maybe it is that today the young have it easier. The deaths in boxing have hurt it, too. And so has television, although in France they do not pay for the bouts as they do in the United States.

"Who knows?" he shrugged in the manner of a man who might have been saying "Who cares?"


Boxing is, to the "Orchid Man" a thing of the past. He is patently happy that he never had to face a Liston. Dempsey was more than enough.
