

Husbands Most Likely To Stray After 6 To 8 Years

WASHINGTON (UPI) — One contribution Marilyn Monroe made to dramatic art was a movie called "The Seven Year Itch," in which she explored the theory that a man whose wife has gone away for the summer probably is vulnerable to a blonde babe, champagne and sweet talk at sundown.

To most people it was a funny show. But not to hundreds of thousands of American wives who found it hit too close to home, and not to psychiatrists and marriage counsellors, who recognize it as a problem that is always grim and sometimes tragic.

Experts now accept as a fact that somewhere between the sixth and eighth year of marriage most American husbands become restless. The home is well furnished and the mortgage payments are being met satisfactorily. Promotions and raises have been arriving on schedule. The two children have survived the perils of infancy, the wife has become an expert on scrambled eggs, the family car is two years old but still has plenty of life.

But suddenly the world seems slightly out of joint. If he lives in the suburbs, he has spent 1,680 hours in seven years on commuting trains and there is a tendency to have a couple of drinks in the station before boarding the iron monster for home in the evening. His secretary's ankle seems trimmer this year than last, and what about that new girl in the typing pool.

He ponders these matters restlessly and sometimes forgets them. Sometimes not case history related by Dr. Benjamin Morse in "The Sexually Promiscuous Male".

Howard O., married eight years to Rita, his high school sweetheart. Junior executive in a big Chicago corporation. Two children, a home in the suburbs. One night a business conference was cancelled and Howard invited a girl in the typing pool for drinks and dinner.

A week later he invited her again. After dinner she invited him in for a nightcap in her apartment. "I wasn't thinking of her in terms of attraction," Howard said. "I thought she was pretty, but I just wanted company for dinner." The affair continued. Howard invented a business trip to Indiana and spent three days in a hotel with the girl. His wife found out about it, began preparations for a divorce, but agreed to consult Morse in connection with her husband. The marriage was saved.

More often than not the wandering husband still loves his wife. "Howard seemed to grow more in love with his wife than ever (while the affair with the typist was going on). Previously he and wife had been having frequent small fights. These fights stopped. Howard became a model husband and father, bringing gifts home for the children more often than he had done in the past and being increasingly solicitous of his wife's comfort and happiness. He was attempting secret atonement for his extra-marital affair."

Some authorities blame unfavorable home atmosphere for the straying of a husband, and one of them, Dr. Virgil G. Damon, puts it this way: "It comes back to this — When a man feels comfortable at home, whether it is clutter and dogs on the furniture or the impersonal chill of a hotel suite, he won't stray very far."

But the case histories of broken homes caused by an unfaithful husband are filled with accounts of men rich enough to have any kind of home atmosphere they choose. And with cases of wives who do everything possible to create the type of environment the husband wants. There is no quick and easy answer to the cause and cure of the "seven year itch."

If a family emerges intact from the first eight years of marriage, there will not likely be another crisis for about 25 years. In their middle fifties many husbands start bringing this problem to psychiatrists: They have fallen in love with a young woman and want to get a divorce. Horace L., 54, married for 27 years, went to Morse for advice.

"I'm married to an old woman," he said. "Chronologically, she is two years younger than I am. But men and women age differently. I'm 54 and I still feel young, act young and think young. My wife is 52 and she might as well be 100."

Worry Over Age

In this case — as in almost all of them — Horace wanted to marry a girl in her twenties. Morse says Horace wasn't really concerned about the aging of his wife. He was worried about getting old himself. A contemporary had just died of a heart attack. Horace was financially independent and no longer pre-occupied with business matters. He had plenty of time to think about the death of his friend and to wonder how much life was left to live. He set out to recapture his youth, and the first piece of equipment he wanted to purchase was a young and attractive woman.

Horace's wife was smart. She discussed the matter with him whenever he so desired. She didn't nag and she didn't complain. Gradually his fever subsided, he began to think less about old age and death. They are still happily married.

OSU Ends 95th Year

OREGON STATE UNIVERSITY — Oregon State University, Oregon's oldest and largest state-supported institution of higher learning, marks the start of its 95th year today.

Because Oct. 27 falls on a Sunday this year, Charter Day will be noted at a special Oct. 29 convocation. Congresswoman Edith Green will be the speaker and outstanding professors will receive teaching awards as a part of the observance.

OSU is one of the nation's land grant, or "people's," colleges that came from the signing of the First Morrill Act in 1862 by President Lincoln. The act provided grants of land to be used by the states for the "sole purpose of endowing, supporting, and maintaining publicly-controlled colleges."

In the case of Oregon, 90,000 acres were provided (50,000 acres for each representative in Congress). These were sold and funds invested. About $6,000 is still received annually in interest.

It was on Oct. 27, 1868, however, when Corvallis College — up to then a community academy and Methodist Church college — was designated by the legislature as the "state college."

Benton Hall, oldest building on campus and the only one for a time in the early years, was a gift from the people of Benton County. It marked transfer of the college campus from downtown Corvallis to its present location. President James H. Jensen pointed out, in noting the tremendous growth of the 95 years.

OSU's enrollment this fall is a record 10,421.

City Backs Olympic Ski Team

LAKEVIEW — With a Lakeview girl, Jean Saubert, rated as the top skier on the U.S. Winter Olympics ski team, this community is putting forth an effort, along with the rest of the state, in a drive to raise funds to finance the team's trip to Innsbruck, Austria, for the Olympics in February, 1964.

The team's expenses are paid through donations of the people of the United States.

Locally, Mrs. Audrey Smith and Jim Howard have been contacting places of business and organizations to establish a means through which residents can donate to the cause. Receipts for donations are by decal, buttons, or other insignia. During the Labor Day parade in Lakeview, a group of local girl skiers promoted a fund drive with a float in the parade and collected $169.

Jean, listed by the team coach, Bob Beattie, as one of the three top women skiers in the world, has been seen for the past several weeks on an Olympics preview being shown on the television program, "Wide World of Sports."

After spending August in training at Mt. Bachelor, near Bend, the team is now at Boulder, Colo.

FATHER AGAIN

ONTARIO, Ore. (UPI) — Mrs. Harmon Killebrew, wife of the Minnesota Twins star, has presented her husband with a baby daughter.

The child, named Katherine, is the fourth for the Killebrews, who have two boys and another girl.

Modoc Union High Plans Homecoming Festivities

ALTURAS — Modoc Union High School's Homecoming weekend has been set for Friday and Saturday, Nov. 1-2. Candidates have been selected by school organizations to run for queen of the event.

The Homecoming queen will be named at the school rally held in the school gym Friday, Nov. 1, at 7:30 p.m.

The Modoc Braves will meet the Trinity eleven for their final football game of the year Saturday afternoon. The junior varsity will play the first game at one p.m. Saturday evening will end the festivities with a big dance at the school sponsored by the Modoc High School band.

The band will hold an informal parade Thursday before the game in downtown Alturas for a pre-game ticket sale. The proceeds will go to the band uniform fund.

Giant Coinword Prize Goes Unclaimed Another Week

EXPLANATIONS ACROSS

1. Great FEARS make competitive forces loom upon those who fear as being weak, and inspire a determination to defeat them entirely. Great FEATS can prove beyond competition and discourage those who cannot match them.
2. Sloppy FITS or fittings detract from a smart appearance. Sloppy FATS would probably be thrown out and have nothing to do with a smart appearance.
3. To fight a VITAL epidemic, doctors must isolate the germ and prepare a serum to combat it. A VIRAL epidemic, doctors must isolate the germ and prepare a serum to combat it. A VIRAL epidemic or one caused by a virus or submicroscopic agent would be difficult to isolate.
4. A little TACK may go a long way if someone sits on it. A little TACT would not even be recognized by a stupid person.
5. A starving person could find it necessary to take a RISK of some sort to earn money. They might find it necessary to take a loaf of bread or any food but not just a RUSK or light, soft, crusty bread.
6. When the water starts to PULL it may be difficult to paddle a canoe against it. It would be impossible to paddle against a stream when the water started to PURL or swirl among obstructions.
7. CM is an abbreviation for centimeter.
8. A little ART can go a long way if it is good enough. A big ANT can go a long way just as well as a little one.
9. The HOB or mischief we raise may become fat in the fire and cause greater mischief. The HOG we raise is fat before it goes in the fire.
10. Circus men make sure their animals are TEXTED while on the road or moving from town to town. They make sure they are TENDED when they are anywhere.
11. Lost in WOODS, an orator might give up entirely. Lost in WORDS, he could be speaking indefinitely.

EXPLANATIONS DOWN

1. An unexpected FAVOR on the part of his boss might cause a man to remain home from work, having been granted a day off. An unexpected FEVER could send him to a hospital.
2. A SOLO pianist might need some support from an orchestra. A SOLE or single pianist would not need support from another pianist if he had been expected to play alone.
3. A new ROOT may eventually supply new branches on a tree. A new ROUTE or state of disorganized flight would not be likely to supply new branches after defeat.
4. One little FLECK or particle of dirt could disturb a meticulous housewife. A LITTLE FLICK or toss of a cigarette could be confined to a ash tray and disturb no one.
5. Before a country is SCARCELY or hardly settled, it has no one in it and someone tries to take over and claim it. By the time it is SPARSELY or thinly settled, it has already been taken over.
6. A secret KNOCK might enable a man to enter a room. A secret KNACK or method would be of no avail if the room were full of people determined to keep him out.
7. A lively BUNCH of people whom her husband was obliged to entertain for business
