

Grafton Is Bilko Out Of Uniform

Bilko, er, Grafton.

By DICK KLEINER
NEW YORK (NEA)—The New Phil Silvers Show is a good deal like the old Phil Silvers show. The critics know it. The audience knows it. And Phil knows it.

"Sure, Grafton is Bilko," Phil says. "That's the hurdle I have to overcome. But let's face it—I was playing that character long before Bilko was ever invented. It's my style of comedy. If Grafton is Bilko, then Bilko is Silvers—and Grafton is Silvers, too. We're all the same guy."

"I realize there will be comparisons. Like Stafford Repp, who plays my boss, will be compared with Paul Ford, who used to play my colonel. But I hope, after the audience has seen the show for six or eight weeks, they'll forget it and just enjoy it."

Phil says it took a long time to find the right vehicle for his current television entree. After the Bilko show ended its hugely successful run, he cast about for several years for another idea. For a time, he almost de-ceded to play a publicity agent. "But I felt," he says, "that the public around the country wouldn't understand a publicity guy's problems. When the factory idea was given to me, I grabbed it. A factory is universal—everybody everywhere can understand it."

Phil admits, quite openly, that this show is his "big push" financially. He owns it, completely.

"I didn't have the money," he says. "To make the films myself. So I borrowed on my residuals. My hope is that it will go three years, and leave me independent. That will take care of my wife and family (four daughters, expecting "one or two more" in January). After that, I can do what I enjoy the most—the Broadway stage."

Television's orphans have a home now. And Richard Carlton is the man with the heart of gold. The arrangement is liable to put some gold in his pocket, too.

Carlton is executive vice president of Television Affiliates Corp., hereinafter called by its more convenient nickname, TAC. The company was set up to care for Carlton's orphans.

That's how he thinks about programs which are produced by local television stations—on-sets, mostly documentary in nature, done on a small local scale without much thought of glory.

"I was selling syndicated shows for Trans-Lux," Carlton says. "And, as I traveled, I'd see some of these shows. There was no possible national outlet for them, and many were quite good. They were orphans."

Carlton got Trans-Lux to underwrite the organization of TAC, which is run by television stations around the country for the purpose of providing these one-shots with national outlets.

Bonanza Star Launches New Recording Career

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Lorne Greene, "Bonanza" co-star, is the last of the singing cowboys. All the other horse opera vocalists have ridden off into the sunset, some of them singing their way to the bank.

Greene and his three co-stars on the popular NBC-TV western made an album in which they sang. The album met with some success and Lorne decided to record another group of songs on his own.

"I'm just about breaking through in about six or seven parts of the country," said Lorne, speaking about his own singing career.

Recording Career
RCA Victor, the NBC network's corporate cousin, asked Lorne if he would be interested in a recording career. Greene, a rugged looking guy, has never thought of himself in terms of Elvis Presley popularity. Lorne is not a wigging singer. "When RCA asked me to make a record I looked at them a little bit and asked them if they just wanted to make a fast buck." Lorne said. "They said, 'no, we think you've got something salable.' They were pretty serious about it. They even gave me advance payment on the recording to prove how serious they were."

"And they gambled more than $15,000 to produce my first album. We're going to do another."

Lorne has already recorded one album singing alone and recently made a single, "Love Finds a Way," backed by "I'm the Same Old Me."

Avoids Westerns
For his first solo singing album, Greene purposely stayed away from the Western style songs which would tie in with his popular series.

"I kept away from them because I didn't want to be identified that way," he explained. "Otherwise people would have said, 'oh sure, he's made a Western series, so now he's doing a Western album.'"

Greene, a former Canadian radio announcer and actor who has a deep, resonant voice, is serious about his potential singing career. He would like to develop his vocal talents, and is now taking singing lessons.

"I enjoy singing," he said. "I want to live up to the best that I think I can be as a singer."

ACTOR AND PAINTER — "Frieda," simian star of "What A Way To Go!" demonstrates her talents as a painter of abstractions as her co-star, Shirley MacLaine, introduces her to members of the press at 20th Century Fox studios. The 3-year-old chimpanzee has a life story in the classic Hollywood mold. Born in the Belgian Congo, she was deserted in infancy by her parents and raised by a kindly missionary. After assorted vicissitudes, she makes her film debut in a major role with Miss MacLaine. —UPI Telephoto
