WALL STREET

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks failed to set a trend today.

Dow Jones industrial average moved up from its low at the close. Rails pulled the surprise of the day by holding a steady gain throughout.

Brokers had predicted that the market might make another break out on the upside once the carriers caught up to the rest of the market.

Wall Street Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — "The present market is highly professional, extremely selective, and no place for the amateur speculator," says the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

It says that "institutional investors and mutual funds that have been mainly responsible for the rise in investment grade stocks since June and October of last year, are reported to be delaying new commitments in blue chip stocks that have had substantial rises. Some profit taking has been evident."

Harris, Upham & Co. notes that most people are not as disturbed about the recent steel price increases as they were in 1962. There is a saying that the stock market never discounts the same thing twice. The increases this time were more carefully handled by steel companies, labor unions perhaps see a chance of higher wages if prices increase and the administration is not expected to oppose a mild inflation," the company says.

Arthur Wiesenberger & Co. says that the present rally will probably last as long as investors feel confident of future growth. "It will not continue indefinitely, but at least for the present the implications for the market generally appear favorable."

George Moose, assistant chief of the plant division, Oregon Department of Agriculture, is chairman of the western states standardization meeting that will be held in Klamath Falls Thursday, Nov. 7.

The meeting, which will be attended by representatives from the western states and British Columbia, is for the purpose of discussing fresh produce grade standards and marketing order regulations.

Among the subjects covered will be processing grades for potatoes; the new U.S. apple grades; watercore in apples, the color of apples, and tests for determining maturity of apples; minimum color for prunes and internal discoloration of prunes; inspection transferees between states; Oregon grade changes; marketing order regulations between states; labeling and marketing regulations.

The department will also be represented at the nursery and quarantine meeting, set for Wednesday of that week at Klamath Falls.

Fire Razes Old Building

A vacant packing house on Polly Drive was severely damaged by fire Wednesday afternoon.

The plant is the former Super Packing House and is presently owned by the St. Pius X Church, which reportedly is intending to tear the building down.

Three Suburban Fire Department trucks were called to the packing house at 1:07 p.m.

Firemen said the flames started in a 20 x 20-foot shed and after destroying it, spread to a stock chute and the east wing of the main building. Both the chute and the wing were "extensively damaged."

No monetary loss was listed because the building is doomed to be torn down.

Hearing Deferred

The date for the public hearing on the proposed widening and paving of Homedale Road from Shasta Way to a point 260 feet north of the south line of Lot 54, Fair Acres Subdivision, has been deferred from tomorrow to Wednesday, Nov. 27, the Klamath County Court announced today.

The court reported that the matter had been continued to allow the commissioners more time to study the proposal. At the first reading of the proposal Wednesday, five property owners appeared before the court to comment on the street improvement work.

Plea Entered For Unsworth

Bill Unsworth, charged with second-degree murder in the shooting of a farm worker last April, stood mute in Circuit Court today and Judge Donald A. W. Piper entered a plea of not guilty for him.

Piper continued the setting of a trial date indicating it probably would be Nov. 18. Unsworth was re-indicted by the Grand Jury after a technicality rendered the original indictment invalid.

In other action, Delmar Lloyd Nash was sentenced to the state prison for a term of not more than two years after pleading guilty to a charge of forging a bank check.

Vacation Ends For Assessor

County Assessor Clyde "Hap" Caldwell was back at his desk today after completing a three-week vacation during which he and his wife, Dorothy, visited their daughter, Rosalie, at Pennsylvania State University and attended the annual convention of the International Association of Assessing Officers at Chicago, Oct. 21 through 25.

Jury Panel Selected

A jury was selected to sit in judgment of Cecil D. Rachal, charged with concealing stolen property, about 11 a.m. Thursday, as the trial of the 48-year-old Boring, Ore., man opened in the circuit court of Judge Jeff D. Dorroh Jr.

Judge Dorroh has been named to preside on the circuit court bench for Judge David R. Vandenberg who is absent due to illness.

Selection of a jury started at 10 a.m. Thursday and concluded a little more than an hour later, after which attorneys for the defendant and the state presented their opening statements.

Rachal was arrested by city police last Aug. 19 after he attempted to sell a transistor radio which had been stolen from the Western Auto Supply, Eleventh and Main Street. Rachal appeared at the Schulze Tire Service, Main and Spring streets, and offered the radio for sale. An employe of the establishment contacted the auto supply store and learned that the radio had been stolen. Rachal then fled from the store and disposed of the stolen property in a nearby alley.

The stolen merchandise was recovered soon after and Rachal was later located by police and arrested.

A thief entered the barn of Clyde V. Johnson, Rte. 1, Box 553, sometime since Sunday and fled with a saddle and other riding equipment valued at $195, Oregon State Police reported Thursday.

Missing is a tan hand-tooled Allen saddle, white leather bridle, and a gray horse blanket with black and red stripes. The Johnson residence is located near the south end of Homedale Road.

Police are also seeking the thief who stole a battery and set of hub caps from a car parked near the Lakeview Junction Tuesday night and then committed vandalism to the vehicle.

The owner of the car, Kenneth Mills of Chiloquin, told police that the vandal broke the windshield and two side windows on the car and then damaged the inside of the vehicle. Mills did not estimate his loss as a result of the damage. Police are continuing to investigate both cases.

The Enemy

Innocent Reporter Finds War Is For The Birds

By DAN WALTERS

Splaaat!

The air was filled with sounds of battle as the enemy bombers dove on my position.

They hurtled one missile and then another and another.

Splaaat . . . splaaat . . . splaat.

Three direct hits.

I arose from my position and raised my fist to the air.

"You damn birds," I yelled at the retreating figures. "Come back and fight like a man."

But they slipped out of sight.

I viewed my car anxiously.

And I saw the results of a perfect dive-bomb attack—three white splotches.

It was time for the annual War of the Seagulls.

These mangy creatures annually migrate from their salt water habitats to the peaceful Klamath Basin to feed — and here they wage a war on the innocent residents of the area.

This year they have come in their usual profusion, drawn by the small fish and other marine life left high and dry with the emptying of the canals.

But back to our war.

I cleaned up the ravages of battle quickly, to avoid permanent damage to my auto's finish. As I was scrubbing madly, I heard a buzzing sound. At first I ignored it, but it became louder and louder.

I looked to the cloudless sky. I saw a dot in the heavens getting closer and closer.

No, no, not another one. Here he comes.

Splaaat.

I went into the house to get a washrag for my face.

And to cry.

Defendant Takes Stand In Murder Trial Here

John Wesley Dean, accused of murdering his brother last July, took the stand on his own behalf today and told jurors that he didn't remember the incident because he was intoxicated.

Dean was the first witness for the defense after the prosecution concluded its case. This morning, the prosecution's main witness, Angus Newton, testified that he saw the Dean brothers scuffling outside a Fifth Street house and that Hagan Dean fell to the street after the fight.

Dean is accused of second-degree murder. Hagan died five days after the fight of a knife wound in his lower neck.

John Dean said he had been afraid of his brother, who, he said, had beaten him on several occasions.

The defense contends John Dean struck his brother in self-defense.

Dean said he had been drinking throughout that day, July 8, and had gone shopping with his brother. He said he remembered Hagan beginning to take a shower in the house at 504½ Fifth Street, and "That's the last thing I remember until I was in the police station."

Newton, however, who lives across Plum Street from that house said he was awakened by the shouts of a man in the street. He said the man was shouting to the Dean house and then wandered away. Later, Newton said, he was again disturbed by shouting and looked out to see the man again "hollering."

He said a larger man, whom he identified as John Dean, came out of the house and the men pushed at each other for a while. He said he could not hear what was being said.

Finally, he said, John Dean turned away and walked bck in the house and the other man, Hagan Dean, staggered around and fell down. Newton told the jury of nine women and three men that he could see blood on the man's shirt so he called police.

Wednesday, the prosecution called Mrs. Julia Bliss, who also lived in the Fifth Street house. She said the two brothers had been arguing before Hagan left the house, then returned at two different times in the street yelling.

She said that after John Dean returned to the house after the scuffle, he placed a case knife in his dresser drawer. A state police lab technician identified that knife as having been covered with blood and having threads apparently from Hagan's shirt.

A pathologist testified that Hagan died five days after the scuffle when two blood vessels that had been nicked by the knife collapsed as Hagan's blood pressure rose. The blood pressure rose as Hagan improved from his wound, which at first had not been thought to be serious. The collapse of the vessels produced massive hemorrhaging which was the actual cause of death.

The defense case was expected to continue this afternoon.

MOUNT SHASTA—Desire on the part of Ronald E. Allen of El Cerrito, Calif., to get a picture of Mount Shasta brought about an accident involving two other vehicles on State Highway 89 Monday.

It also brought about a citation from the California Highway Patrol for the El Cerrito photographer and a logging truck driver, M. D. Acord of Mount Shasta.

The incident occurred at 10:30 a.m. when Allen stopped on the highway to take a picture of the mountain. Herbert H. Bohse of Redding was following closely, and seeing trucks approaching in the left lane passed the parked car on the right side to avoid a collision.

Trucker Acord was close behind Bohse, and when he saw the oncoming trucks accelerated to pass the Allen car on the correct left side. Acord made the pass, but hit Bohse as he came back on the highway from the right.

The Bohse automobile was knocked down a six-foot bank and the driver sustained minor injuries.
