What If Future Hubby Snores?

By ANN LANDERS
Dear Ann Landers: I am a girl 14 with a serious problem. My real father died when I was 4 and mother remarried a man I did not like. My step-father did not treat my mother right and he was very mean to me. I never remember him smiling or saying one kind word to anybody.

It so happens that my step-father snored something terrible and his snoring used to keep me up at night. I finally stuffed cotton in my ears so I could sleep. This went on until last year when he left my mother for another woman.

I have gone to many slumber parties and they are lots of fun. But there is one girl in our crowd who snores very loud and I refuse to go to a slumber party if I know she has been invited.

The thought just struck me, Ann—what if I marry a man who snores? My life would be wrecked. Is there a way I could find out before marriage? Please help me. — WORRIED LYNN

Dear Lynn: Yes, there is a way to find out, and I don't recommend it.

Sometimes snoring is caused by a nasal obstruction and a doctor can help. If there is nothing organically wrong, a gentle nudge or moving the snorer's head to the side may produce results. As a last resort, wax earplugs are better than cotton.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a minister with a church of 1,700 resident members. I often quote you in my sermons and refer to you as one of my mentors. What can be done about time and energy wasted on rehearsals and weddings? Rehearsals are often repetitious and nerve-racking. The rigamarole of the wedding itself is becoming more and more commercial and less spiritual.

After the ceremony hundreds of guests stand outside waiting while the bride party takes pictures. Then there are more pictures taken beside the cake—plus pictures with grandparents and distinguished guests. Weddings used to be sacred.

Pedestrian Hit, Then Hijacked

SEATTLE (UPI)—The operator of the car that struck Mrs. Dortha McKenzie, 44, in an Aurora Way crosswalk Tuesday night not only was a hit-and-run driver, he also was a hijacker.

After knocking Mrs. McKenzie down with severe face cuts the driver stopped long enough to walk back and pick up the 12-pack of beer his victim had been carrying, police reported.
