THE WORLD IN FOCUS

DUCK FEET—Sometimes a duck could be like a fish out of water, but these ducklings and their mother prove differently. The fuzzy little critters, faced with the obstacle of a concrete stairway, just followed mom with flutter-and-hop until they reached the top. Such are the problems of a duck in St. Petersburg, Fla.

LONG LOOK—Adding even more height to a high-crowned bowler, ostrich plumes top the hat in a wispy mood. It is Britain's answer to "what is fall fashion?" It'll also make her as tall as her escort.

AGE OF DISCOVERY—Meeting eye to eye, this youngster studies the little frog with intense interest. This photo of the New York youngster is a prize-winner.

BETWEEN BALES—Tom Murphy snuggled between bales of hay and took a snooze before his Shorthorn cows came in to fill the empty stalls. Tom rested in the stalls of the Santa Cruz, Calif., fair grounds.

A PART OF THINGS—This leafy bower is part of a Berlin convent. Rather than level the splendid old tree, architects incorporated it into the structure.

OPEN HOUSE—Open house display of furniture in this unfinished apartment house was really an open house. The setting: one floor of a 27-story apartment building in the Pittsburgh, Pa., Golden Triangle.

YOUNG ADMIRER—Belgian actress Chatherin Spaak, 18, chats with Christopher Buchholz, who visited the Rome set of a movie starring the actress and dad, Horst.

RARE CARGO—A gleaming locomotive is prepared for transfer into the hold of a cargo ship with care and seemingly lots of supervision. The locomotive is a rare British type being shipped to the Canadian Railroad Museum in Delson, Quebec, along with 21 feet of original track.

FAIR LADY—As streamlined as the lines of the buildings at the site of the 1964 New York World's Fair, this shift is done in a "silk" broadcloth of man-made fiber. The dress features a pleated and ruffled yoke and is casually fitted with long shirt sleeves.

SLEEK LINES—The "Mermaid" is the latest thing for the do-it-yourselfer who likes to make sailing boat kits. The boat is 11 feet long, is low in price and was the hit of London's Do It Yourself Exhibition.

SEA SEARCH—As residents casually watch from their cars, workers on this 700-ton coal drilling tower search for coal beneath the sea near Roker, England. It's a big attraction for many tourists who visit the seaside town.

TASTE OF MONEY—Once this clown bank gets the taste of money, he continues to eat it up. The antique is one from the Chase Manhattan Bank's Money Museum.
