SEATTLE (UPI)—Mrs. Allan Six, English and drama instructor at Everett's Cascade High School, planned to resign her teaching position Tuesday in a hassle over a word in a school play.

Mrs. Six refused to change the word "nigger" in Carson McCullough's drama "A Member of the Wedding."

The controversy began about the last of October, Mrs. Six said while she was putting the final polish on the play, a school production.

"The father of one of the cast members, a Negro, came to me very nicely and asked me to change the word 'nigger' where it occurred in the play to 'black boy' or some other phrase," Mrs. Six said.

Mrs. Six said she could not, in good faith, tamper with such a work of literature and the father then talked with Burt Colburn, principal of the school.

"Unfortunately, the father's reasoning sounded plausible to Mr. Colburn," Mrs. Six said. "He left Mr. Colburn's office with the impression the word would be changed."

Colburn suggested the change be made, Mrs. Six said, but she said she would have no part in mutilating the play. Colburn then suggested dropping the play altogether and Mrs. Six agreed.

Mrs. Six said Colburn called the cast and crew of the play together last Tuesday, the day before the play's preview, and that the students were given until Wednesday morning to decide if they wanted to put on the play.

The cast voted to drop the play at a meeting Wednesday morning. However, a number of the meeting was called Wednesday afternoon and this time the vote favored putting on the play.

The play was presented, without a director, Thursday and Friday.

Mrs. Six said she learned Friday she would be permanently removed from all drama classes.

"Drama is my major and the only reason I drive all the way up there is to teach in my field," she said. "I can teach English a lot closer to home."

She said she called Colburn Monday and told him she would submit her resignation Tuesday. Mrs. Six also said she called the author in New York last Thursday night and told her of the proposed change.

"She told me it was 'absolutely unthinkable' and suggested I contact her agent," Mrs. Six said. "I've since sent her a letter to tell her her disapproval made no difference."

MRS. RAYMOND TICE and Mrs. Truman Johnson, Klamath Falls, were Thursday luncheon guests of Mrs. Herman Vowell.

MR. AND MRS. VINCENT HAVLINA spent several days last week visiting his mother, Mrs. Annie Havlina, who is a patient in Lodi Hospital. They also visited Havlina's sister, Mrs. Elsie Garish, while there.

JAMES LACY, Andy Travis, Al Samples and Kenneth Duncan spent the three-day weekend elk hunting at Desolation Meadows in eastern Oregon.

SALEM (UPI)—Anti sales tax pickets paraded in front of the Capitol Building here Tuesday.

More than a dozen student members of the Greater Portland Young Democratic Club carried signs proclaiming "Make Corporations Pay," "First Tax on SP—Then Me," "Make PP&L Fork Over," "Fork Over Crown Z" and "No Sales Tax."

The group was headed by Jim Berland, treasurer of the Greater Portland Area Young Democrats. He said pickets from Eugene and Coos Bay were scheduled to join the group later.

The students from Reed College and Portland State handed out leaflets stating "we demand progressive taxation."

They said they were opposed to taxes not based on ability to pay.

"A sales tax places the burden of taxation primarily on the lower and middle income brackets. Though it is clear that additional revenue must be raised there are better ways of securing these revenues than by a sales tax," the leaflet said.

Heller Urges Tax Cut Now

WASHINGTON (UPI)—White House economic expert Walter W. Heller told senators Tuesday that the nation can afford to give everybody a tax cut now, and discounted arguments that it would trigger a spiral of wage and price increases.

Heller made his latest pitch for the House-passed $11 billion tax cut in testimony before the Senate Finance Committee which plans hearings until just before Christmas, with little or no likelihood of floor action this year.

Heller testified that tax reduction offered the best hope against the threat of recession.
