The COMPLETE BOWLER

1--Add Them All Together

RAY BLUTH makes a form chart on a lane.

By RAY BLUTH
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

There is no such thing as the perfect bowler. If he existed, he would roll nothing but 300 games.

Each of the top high rollers, however, does one or more things perfectly. If we could add them all together in one kegler we would have the complete bowler—one who would do everything right and would make Don Carter, Dick Weber and all us professionals look like the low roller in a ladies' Saturday night league.

Such a paragon is hardly likely ever to exist, but the search for perfection is fun and one of the things that makes the sport challenging.

I have been called a dedicated student of bowling and bowlers, which I certainly try to be. If I am not the world's greatest bowler—and I'm not—it is not for lack of work.

The fact that I've gone as far as I have is pretty good testimony to the effectiveness of studying all phases of the game, from the lanes and pins themselves right up to the individual styles of those whose accomplishments make them worthy of emulation.

Over the years I've connected quite a bit of know-how about the various fine professionals. I think I know what makes each one of them tick, just what each one does better than the other.

In these articles I'll try to pass along my knowledge of the best parts of each star's game. Maybe you can adopt them all (I haven't been able to). If you can't, you'll profit anyway because your game can improve only if you seek perfection.

If you should find you can learn to do each of the things that each of these stars does to perfection you will become the first complete bowler.

And nobody will play with you.
