

Payroll Change Reflects Orderly Transfer Of Leadership In U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Effective 2 p.m. EST, Friday, Nov. 22, the name of John F. Kennedy was removed from the government's payroll as President and replaced with that of Lyndon B. Johnson.

Washington (UPI)—Effective 2 p.m. EST, Friday, Nov. 22, the name of John F. Kennedy was removed from the government's payroll as President and replaced with that of Lyndon B. Johnson.

GAO's books were not made until Tuesday since the office was closed Monday, the official day of mourning for the slain President. But it was made retroactive to that tragic hour when the President passed away.

He also began receiving the $50,000 annual allowance given to the President "for defraying expenses relating to or resulting from the discharge of his official duties."

The law also provides that the widow of a President is entitled to a $10,000 life-time pension, but to receive it she must waive the right to any other government annuity for which she may be eligible.

There was one interesting bookkeeping aspect of the tragic change that came about last Friday. The GAO said the pay on that day for both the late President and his successor would be pro-rated.

White House Opens For Tours Again

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The White House, still draped in mourning crepe, opens for public tours again today at the request of Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy.

The simple catafalque which bore President Kennedy's body remains in place in the East Room, two crossed swords replacing the coffin. Four tall candlesticks flank the catafalque and the chandeliers and windows of the room are shrouded in black.

A small light shines from a single basket of flowers near the catafalque, and a replica of the late President's great seal is displayed.

The other public rooms of the White House will have the same look of mourning to those who pass through during the four hours from 10 a.m. EST to noon. There will be no flowers, except near the catafalque in the East Room, and none of the other touches the late President enjoyed so much.

The White House will remain in mourning for a full month until Sunday Dec. 22. The great hanging lamp in the north porch and its other entrances will be draped in black bunting and the flag on the roof will be flown at half-staff during the period of state mourning proclaimed by President Johnson.

Millions of tourists have passed through the executive mansion in the past few years. Largely through the efforts of Mrs. Kennedy, it has been a showplace of American arts and crafts, filled with costly antiques, paintings and other objects.

Visitors will see the famed East Room, the largest in the executive mansion, as it looked when the body of Mrs. Kennedy's husband lay in repose there last weekend. President Kennedy was assassinated just one week ago in Dallas, Tex.

The former First Lady inspected the East Room and the other public rooms of the White House before she flew to Hyannis Port, Mass., Thursday to spend Thanksgiving with the Kennedy family.

Long Lines Of Mourners Continue To Visit Grave

ARLINGTON NATIONAL CEMETERY (UPI)—Mourners by the tens of thousands are wearing a scar of sorrow across the Virginia hillside leading to the grave of the slain President Kennedy.

The pilgrimages of tribute show no signs of slackening. Long lines of mourners were waiting at Arlington National Cemetery Thursday even before the gates opened at 8 a.m.

As the day wore on, the lines snaked across the hillside, pausing at the white-fenced grave of the President, and then moving on.
