Burglars Vandalize Store Here

Vandal-burglars smashed their way into the Oregon Food Store on Shasta Way Wednesday night, threw merchandise around, but apparently took only some candy and two wallets.

The burglary was discovered late Thursday morning by Joseph Fales, president of the food store chain.

Police said the burglars may have been juveniles. The thieves smashed a hole in a glass door of the store by throwing pieces of earth at the door. Once inside the store, they scattered clothing from shelves over the floor, ripping part of it. A Polaroid camera was placed in a sack to be taken, but the thieves forgot it.

Next, the burglars broke another glass door into the adjacent Fashion Villa and scattered clothing around the store. A mannequin was broken and its clothes ripped off. Jewelry was thrown about.

The Fashion Villa's cash register was knocked over, but the thieves couldn't open it. It was later reported to have been empty. Two women's wallets were taken from the Fashion Villa.

One fears that these pickets are crackpots — of whom we have too many already.

Incidentally — It might not be a bad idea if mere of our people — as a matter of information and education — would do some reading about the other great religions of the world — such as Buddhism and Mohammedanism.

As literature, they're far better than a lot of the stuff that gets read these days.

The Thanksgiving holiday's strangest traffic accident: As a California highway patrolman started up on the Dumbarton bridge south of San Francisco yesterday, he saw a car lying upside down in the shallow water. He had a hunch that somebody might be inside it. So he stripped off his clothes, waded out through the bone-chilling water, found a handle, pulled a door open, reached inside, felt a human arm and started to pull out what he thought was a corpse.

To his amazement, the "corpse" struggled out of his grasp, pepped up out of the water and began gasping for air.

What had happened? The car had skidded off the bridge approach and turned over in the water. When it turned over, it trapped A POCKET OF AIR. By bending his head back, the driver was able to breathe this air. It kept him alive until the cop came into the picture — about 40 minutes after the accident.

Truth sometimes is stranger than fiction. If a fiction writer had invented that situation, his readers would have scoffed and said it was TOO imaginative.

4 Victims Of Crash Improving

Four members of a Pebble Beach, Calif., family who were injured in a spectacular collision involving their automobile and a truck and trailer near Midland early Thanksgiving Day are in satisfactory condition, the Klamath Valley Hospital reported today.

The Klamath Valley Hospital reported before noon today that Nancy Berger and her brother, Benjamin, had been released from the hospital. Their parents are still hospitalized, as the result of an automobile accident yesterday in which the four people were injured.

The accident is believed to have developed when the car went out of control on the icy pavement and skidded broadside into the path of an oncoming truck. The impact of the collision drove the front end of the car under the truck and shattered many of the windows into pieces the size of buckshot.

The most severely injured of the Berger family was the father, John K., 53, who sustained a crushed foot, a back laceration and other injuries. He was pinned in the wreckage for some two hours while a Klamath Falls Fire Department crew worked to extricate his foot that had been pinned between the door and the frame of the car.

Also injured were his wife, Elaine, 50, his son, Benjamin, 19, and a daughter, Nancy, 24. All three received back and hip injuries. The hospital could not say when any of the patients would be discharged.

Fish-Game Council Votes To Oppose Federal Bills

The Oregon Fish and Game Council has voted to oppose the passage of three federal bills which would affect public lands, it developed during a meeting of the council's board of directors representing chapters in six Oregon counties, C. E. "Red" Millhorn, state president, told the Herald and News Friday.

Earlier this month members of the Klamath County chapter went on record as opposing the same bills.

The proposed legislation which is in disfavor with the sportsmen includes: Land and Conservation Bill, No. SB659, which would require the purchase of an automobile windshield sticker to enter government lands.

Udall Bill, HR235, which permits the Department of Interior to sell public lands not to the highest bidder, but to whom they believe to be the most responsible.

Wilderness Bill, SB4, which sets aside as a wilderness area some 60 million acres in four western states to the exclusion of logging, grazing and mining interests.

The council urged sportsmen opposing the legislation to express those views in letters to their congressmen.
