Free Meals for Birds

By Walter Eckart

This is the time of year to make a bird feeding station. Here are two ideas you may want to try. In the first one, you simply nail a pie tin to a fence or clothesline post. In the second one, you punch three holes in the edge of the tin, knot cords through the holes, and hang it from a tree branch. Be sure to place your feeding station where you can have the fun of watching the birds (and maybe some other creatures, too) enjoy the feast once they have discovered your free meal service. Pet shops can supply various kinds of seed that birds are known to like, or you can use suet, bread, and other table scraps.

The Ticking Clock

By Georgia Martin

To play this game you need only a few players and a loud ticking clock. Give the clock to one of the players and tell him to hide it somewhere outside the room. He can put it under a pillow, behind some books, behind another clock, or some other good hiding place. When he calls "Okay!" the hunt begins. Players will have to keep quiet in order to hear the tick. The one who finds the clock is the next hider.

Peep Card

By Maude E. Hallmer

Next time a friend has a birthday, send him a "peep" card. It's made from a cardboard tube such as you find inside a paper-towel roll. Cut two circles of paper a little larger than the ends of the tube. On one print a birthday greeting. Then fasten both circles smoothly over the ends of the tube with rubber bands, taking care that the written message faces the inside of the tube. Now punch a hole in the center of the other circle. Decorate the tube with colored paper and ribbon. You'll have fun making this peep card, and when your friend looks through the hole, he is sure to be delighted with your original way of congratulating him.

"When Jeffrey has fever, I give the new aspirin with Vitamin 'C'."

Jeffrey Richardson, age 6, Seattle, Wash. Now his fever comes down fast.

"Am I glad I found out about Aspirand-plus," Mrs. Lee Richardson of Seattle, Washington, tells us.

"I always knew that plain aspirin would lower fever but Fletcher's Aspirand-plus* has more to it. It has Vitamin 'C', too. Aspirand-plus really got Jeffrey's temperature back to normal fast."

When your child has fever from cold or flu, give new Aspirand-plus. It's made by Fletcher's, the oldest, most dependable name in children's medicines.

And unlike ordinary aspirin, Fletcher's Aspirand-plus contains Vitamin "C", recommended by many doctors to help maintain resistance. It has not just one, but two fast fever-breaking ingredients to lower fever fast.

You'll also be glad to know that Fletcher's Aspirand-plus is easy to take. In fact, it has such a pleasant orange flavor, your child can just chew it.

So to lower fever fast and for painful cold miseries and teething pain give Fletcher's Aspirand-plus for children. Now at drug counters everywhere.
