

Granges Drape Charters In Memory Of President

The Midland Grange has received a letter from National Grange Master Herschel D. Newson asking it and all other granges to drape their charters in black for the late President John Kennedy.

The local chapter's charter was so draped for Kennedy and for Bernard Lervin, a Midland member who died recently.

The letter was received at a meeting of the grange.

In other business, Home Economics Club chairman Alice Hoover reported that the next club meeting would be held at the home of Minnie Andrieu Dec. 17 at 1 p.m. Gifts will be exchanged.

The Midland Grange Christmas party will be held at the grange hall Dec. 22 beginning at 6 p.m. There will be a no-host potluck dinner and a program and Santa Claus will make an appearance for the youngsters.

Legislative chairman James Flowers spoke on the Boardman issue before the grange meeting.

Virginia Scala, youth chairman, reported the youth will meet Dec. 11.

Master Louis Stork appointed Hip Largent, Leon Andrieu and James Flowers as the auditing committee.

Almost — But Not Quite

A Bend man, Tony Alvey, came within a hair's breadth of winning the weekly Coinword Contest on an entry he submitted for the Nov. 29 puzzle.

The difference between an "a" and "o" cost Tony $2,500, the Coinword prize. It's enough to make a person want to turn on all the gas jets.

This was the clue: "13. While knitting, a young lady might notice that the whole thing had suddenly . . . (Paled, Pulled)."

Tony's answer should have been "paled" but for some reason he inserted the letter "o" into the blank provided, P—LLED.

So the contest continues.

Whatever the reason, the mistake was costly and it prolonged the contest. All of Alvey's other words were correct. This takes some real doing. Rarely, if ever, has a contestant missed only one word and the Herald and News Coinword editor is sorry Tony came so close without bringing home the bacon—especially right here in front of Christmas.

The Coinword Puzzle is sponsored by Suburban Drug Company and Waggoner Drug Company, one in the shopping center, South Sixth Street; the other at Eighth and Main.

Be Careful What You Do — It May Be Illegal

By DAN WALTERS

Did you know that in the city of Klamath Falls it is illegal: —For any person to keep more than two doe rabbits or one male rabbit "for breeding purposes"; —For a woman to enter a "bawdyhouse"; —For a barber to advertise his prices; or —For anyone to conduct any human endurance contest such as "marathon dance, marathon race, marathon exhibition, walkathon . . ."

Ordinances prohibiting these activities and numerous other occupations are revealed in the Code of the City of Klamath Falls, which was adopted last week as the law of the city. It will go into effect in January.

The code gathers together all the ordinances passed by the city council during the past 50-odd years into one book, eliminating some and condensing all.

The project was done by the Michie City Publications Company of Los Angeles.

Many of the ordinances were passed decades ago for a particular situation and today seem strange, and in some cases, funny.

The ordinances banning marathon dances and other similar activities undoubtedly grew out of the 1920's when such contests were popular—and when they were viewed with apprehension by the then "older generation."

There are two ordinances pertaining to "bawdyhouses." They are numbered 74-1 and 74-2, indicating they were among the first ordinances ever passed by the city council—perhaps in response to a rampant problem of 50-odd years ago.

Ordinance 74-1 says: "It shall be unlawful for any person to let or rent any house, room, shop or other building whatsoever, or any boat, booth, garden or other place, within the city, knowing that such house, room, shop or other building will be used for the purpose of a bawdyhouse, or having reason to believe that the same will be so used."

The councilmen of that day really covered the field of abodes, even going so far as to ban boats. But, interestingly enough, there is no reference to any person owning his own building and going into business.

But, the councilmen, although feeling they had effectively banned bawdyhouses from the city, somewhat cynically passed another ordinance.

If there is to be a bawdyhouse, they ordered: "It shall be unlawful for any woman to be in any bawdyhouse within the city."

The origin of the ordinance banning advertising by barbers is a little more vague.

Presumably, the ordinance was enacted to correct a situation prevalent in the city.

The ordinance says, in part: "It shall be unlawful in the city for any barber to advertise prices for barber services either by means of display signs or glaring light signs, or signs upon or in the windows of the establishment where the particular business is operated, or by publication or handbill, or in any other form of advertising."

The rest of the ordinance bans barbers using advertising solicitors, the advertisement of free work or the use of "cappers or steers."

The ordinance banning "more than two doe rabbits and one male rabbit, for breeding purposes and 20 rabbits over the age of 10 weeks" is the oldest of the city laws pertaining to animals.

Again, the exact reason for the ordinance is not known, but it is assumed it was passed to correct an apparent overpopulation of rabbits in the city a number of years ago.

The city fathers, through the years, have branded a number of items and situations as general nuisances and subject to abatement.

These include offensive drains, keeping of hogs or swine, or more than two dogs; the maintaining of a slaughterhouse, offensive enclosures for horses and cattle, fires on city pavements, and "roosters which disturb neighborhood."

One of the most common activities in the city, at least on one night of the year, is banned by one ordinance passed many years ago.

This ordinance bans Halloween pranks, even of the nature usually allowed by society. The ordinance reads: "It shall be unlawful to mark, mar or disfigure any property, buildings, show windows, automobiles or windows in any house or automobile within the city, by the use of soap, chalk, charcoal or in any other method, and any person committing such act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor."

Another prevalent children's activity which is banned by ordinance is roller skating on tennis courts, to wit: "It shall be unlawful for any person to skate or propel themselves by means of roller skates upon and over any of the tennis courts within the city."

In the ordinances passed through the history of the city, the city council has taken upon itself a great measure of regulation of business.

Literally hundreds of ordinances deal with the operation of businesses within the city, including the requiring of business licenses.

Other ordinances limit the activities of door-to-door salesmen, set the hours of sales, ban jewelry auctions during December, and, in one case, prohibit more than two pawnbrokers to operate within the city.

Skating rinks at one point in the city's history came under the eye of the city council and eight ordinances were passed pertaining to their operation. The ordinances set requirements for licenses, require that good order be maintained, prohibit minors in the rinks after 9:45 p.m. and set closing hours.

In an ordinance similar to the one prohibiting the operation of more than two pawnshops in the city, the city council also has decreed that it shall be unlawful to maintain more than three taxicab stands in the city. By the same token, the councilmen said that "parking stands and locations for taxicabs shall be limited to one stand per company with space for not more than one vehicle in each stand. . . ." This, in effect, limits the number of taxicab companies within the city to three—at least if they use stands. And the council has banned the parking of a taxicab in any other place but a stand.

In another action, the council has limited the activities of trees—by issuing an ordinance banning the planting of poplar or willow trees within the city. This, it is said, is because these trees are injurious to sewer lines.

Altogether, the new Code of the City of Klamath Falls contains nearly 500 pages of ordinances, more than 1,500 laws in all—and they affect every citizen in his every activity.

Central Oregon Will Offer Adult Classes At Fort Rock

FORT ROCK — Registration for classes in welding and psychology in the Central Oregon College Continuing Education Program for Adults program is planned 8 p.m., Dec. 11, at the Christmas Valley Recreation Hall.

Welding instructor Marshall Bishop, as well as the psychology instructor, Lynn McCall, will be present, along with Robert Johnson, director of the area program for the college.

An earlier sign-up indicated major interest in these courses. At the Wednesday meeting, the groups will decide on the day of the week as well as specific location for the courses. All interested North Lake County residents are invited to enroll.

Those unable to be at the registration session may have a friend sign up for them or notify Bud Parks, Fort Rock.

While these courses are non-transferable, they provide an opportunity to increase skills as well as fulfilling the desire of adults to continue to learn. More than 50 million Americans are reported to be participating in various adult education programs throughout the United States, according to Johnson.

The courses offered here are the first to be provided in the North Lake County locale and are a part of the increased service of Central Oregon College.
