

State Bids For NASA

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An Oregon delegation, led by Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., and Robert Short, vice president of Portland General Electric Co., Wednesday urged the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) to locate a research center in the Portland area.

The delegation listed some of Oregon's technical and climactic advantages in an effort to have a $37 million electronic research complex in the state.

Oregon's group was one of many such delegations bidding for the project which NASA said would eventually employ 2,100 to 2,700 persons. The projected center would occupy 1,100 acres.

Short suggested a site in the Tualatin Valley to NASA examiner George Simpson.

Dr. James Jensen, president of Oregon State University, presented a description of what he termed the "academic boulevard" which stretches from Seattle to San Diego and through the Willamette Valley. It would offer scientific personnel and laboratories for work related to space, he said.

Anti-Canadian Lumber Marking Requirement Approved By Senate-House Group

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House-Senate conference committee Wednesday approved a lumber marking requirement that was a key factor in the drive to cut back Canada's $200 million a year softwood lumber sales to the United States.

The requirement would make it necessary for all sawed lumber imported into the United States to be marked with country of origin after March 31, 1964. It is a keystone in any attempt to enforce "Buy-American" practices.

The requirement had been added to a House-passed bill as an amendment when the bill was approved by the Senate last June. It was included in the compromise bill worked out Wednesday by a House-Senate conference committee. The compromise now must be approved by both houses before the bill goes to President Johnson for signature.

The State, Commerce and Treasury departments had opposed the marking requirement in hearings on the proposal, and former President Dwight D. Eisenhower vetoed a similar measure in 1960.

Opponents argued it would violate Canadian-U.S. trade agreements and run counter to U.S. efforts to achieve freer trade. Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., hailed the conference committee action as "a constructive step toward helping our Pacific Northwest lumber industry." Canada exported about $200 million worth of softwood lumber to the United States last year, accounting for about 15 per cent of U.S. domestic softwood construction. Lumber industry spokesmen have said the Canadian share of the U.S. market increased this year. Only one other lumber bill has advanced in Congress so far this session. The Senate last week passed legislation to extend an exemption that allowed U.S. lumber to be shipped to Puerto Rico in foreign vessels. Purpose of the continued exemption was to enable U.S. lumber to compete with Canadian lumber in Puerto Rico. Other measures which have been submitted include bills which would restrict imported softwood to 6 per cent of U.S.

consumption and require that only U.S. lumber be used in construction built with federal funds or with federal government-guaranteed loans.

Country-of-origin marking would be crucial to any such "buy-American" campaigns which the lumber industry has quietly tried to foster.

her new home a 12-room colonial-style house in the swank Georgetown section of the capital, only blocks from where she lived with her husband in a happier day.

Complete with an elevator, an outside patio, and a view of the Potomac from a rooftop "captain's watch," the house was listed for sale at $100,000. The exact sale price, however, was not announced.

The new house is across the street from where Mrs. Kennedy is now living in a home lent her by Undersecretary of State W. Averell Harriman. Three blocks away, is another home formerly owned by the Kennedys when the late President was a senator.

A spokesman for Mrs. Kennedy said Wednesday that she and her two children, Caroline, 6, and John Jr., 3, would move into the house next month.

The house was purchased from James M. Gibson, a retired investment broker. Gibson originally listed the house for sale at $350,000 but recently lowered it.

Built around 1794, Gibson said the mottled brick building is believed to be Georgetown's second oldest house. It has seven bedrooms, cathedral ceilings, and foot-thick walls.

The first floor drawing room opens out on to an enclosed patio. To the right of the center hall is the dining room. Behind it is the kitchen and servants' quarters.

The house was described by Pamela Turnure, Mrs. Kennedy's press secretary, as "quite spacious." She said the President's widow is expected to move in about the middle of January.

In the White House Wednesday, President Johnson signed legislation giving Mrs. Kennedy Secret Service protection, along with free mailing privileges, and office help.

Under the bill, Secret Service agents will be available to protect the Kennedy family for as long as two years. The mailing privileges were for her lifetime.

The entire amount authorized Mrs. Kennedy was $65,000. Out of this $15,000 was to be used to defray burial costs for President Kennedy and $50,000 to pay her staff.

Settling into the White House, Mrs. Johnson took over a traditional First Lady's job. She brought Christmas toys to children in the District of Columbia General Hospital. With her daughter, Lucy Baines, Mrs. Johnson toured the wards giving the youngsters, puzzles, blocks, and sewing sets.

Mrs. Johnson told the children that one of the "last things" President Kennedy did was to arrange for all the toys that were brought here today.
