Kindness Helps

By OSWALD JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

South's two heart bid was inspired. He really should have passed his partner's two diamond overcall.

West opened the queen of spades. East took his ace and, on the theory that it was "Be kind to declarers' day," returned a low trump. South proceeded to take advantage of East's kindness. He covered East's queen with dummy's king, led the ten spot, crossed to his hand with the king of spades, cashed his ace of hearts to pick up the last two trumps, finessed dummy's queen of diamonds, cashed the ace, ruffed another diamond, finessed the queen of clubs, discarded his two losing spades on the long diamonds and wound up with all the tricks except that ace of spades taken by East.

South felt that North should have either doubled the one spade opening for takeout or at least have raised two hearts to three. North felt that he had bid perfectly, pointing out that the play was extremely lucky. This didn't mollify South at all. He was still mad at North.

The argument didn't impress West in the slightest. The game was duplicate and West was sure that South's score would be a top. Finally, West could stand it no longer. He said, "If my partner had led back a spade you idiots wouldn't be arguing. South would have made three hearts or possibly only two hearts. But now you have a top score. What more do you want?"

West was right. He was also right that South would not have made more than three hearts if East had returned a spade. But four hearts can be made on a double dummy play.
