Ed Sullivan Lives True Life Of New Yorker

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Ed Sullivan lives the kind of New York City life that many non-New Yorkers envision in their daydreams.

Ed may not be the Newest, but he's certainly the Yorkest.

For instance, he lives in a hotel, the Delmonico at 59th Street and Park Avenue, where his rent might well balance the national debt. Every night—almost without exception—he has dinner in a flossy restaurant. And when he's not at home or dining, chances are Old Stone Face will be found in a taxi cab.

What's more, Ed is no immigrant to Bigtown on the Hudson. He was born there in 1902.

Sullivan and his wife Sylvia, married 33 years, have lived at the Delmonico for 20 years. They are visited frequently by their daughter Betty and her brood who live in Scarsdale. Betty's husband, Robert Peck, produces Ed's CBS-TV show.

And the Sullivans stop off in Scarsdale often enough to enjoy their grandchildren: Robby, 9; Carla, 8; Vincent, 6, and Andrew, 3.

Crazy About Kids

"We're really crazy about the kids," Sullivan said. "And we're mighty proud of Betty and Bob, too. They went to UCLA together."

Ed's day begins about 10 o'clock when he gets out of bed for breakfast, the only meal Sylvia prepares. It is usually the telephone that wakes the man of the house. Most of the morning and afternoon are devoted to writing his column and gathering news and gossip via the phone.

Almost every night the Sullivans attend the theater or a nightclub. It's a threefold garr-a relaxing diversion, a means of sizing up talent for his show and a source of news.

"I still think of myself as a newspaperman, first, last and always," Sullivan says.

For dinner the Sullivans can be found at one of five places, Dinty Moore's, Pavillon, Twenty-One, The Colony or Danny's Hideaway. Or, as Ed says, "at any of a million great Italian joints."

Second Place Sylvia

"We eat out," he says, "because Sylvia's cooking can't compare with the chefs' of New York, although she is pretty good at broiling lamb chops."

After dinner and the theater, and perhaps a night club, the Sullivans get to bed at 1 or 2 a.m.

They have no live-in help, but a maid does appear daily to keep their hotel-apartment in order. Ed's office occupies one of the apartment's six rooms, so it is unnecessary for him to rush off to work in the morning.

Ten years ago the Sullivans bought a suburban home near Southbury, Conn. But returning home from a show one night Ed's car was broadsided by another automobile, breaking seven of his ribs and fracturing a chest bone. "That made up my mind to get the hell out of the country," says city boy Sullivan.

Travel Requirements

Ed's Sunday night variety show demands an enormous number of acts and performers almost all of which he roots out by himself. This requires traveling around the city catching rehearsals and performances.

But even his beloved Manhattan cannot provide the necessary number of acts. He travels to Europe four times annually and to Hollywood two or three times a year in his never-ending quest for talent. This is the major part of his preparation for the show.

Each Saturday he pops into CBS for rehearsals, working the entire day. Sunday he continues to smooth out the program, juggling the acts and performances until showtime.

The theater is only a few blocks from his home—at 53rd and Broadway.

Sylvia collects good paintings and was delighted with Ed's gift to her on their 25th wedding anniversary, an original Renoir. Says Sullivan, "I've been broke ever since. But we collect paintings we like, not just valuable old masters."

No Pets

The Sullivans have no pets, but they did own a series of dogs during their married life. The last one, Bojangles, died at the age of 15 more than two years ago.

"His death was such a heartbreaking experience that we've decided not to go through that agonizing experience again," Ed explains.

Of necessity Ed's hobbies and social activities are inexorably tied up with his jobs. He relaxes while he works and works while he relaxes, listening to records, seeing movies, plays and nightclub acts—all with an eye to the show and his column.

EDUCATION MAIN PURPOSE

BLACKSBURG, Va. (UPI)—Virginia Polytechnic Institute (VPI), in an effort to cut down freshman class dropouts, has eliminated the shoe shining and brass polishing chores of new members of the Corps of Cadets.

VPI President T. Marshall Hahn said the period formerly set aside for freshman cadets to perform chores for upper classmen now has been designated for study.

"The primary purpose of going to college is to obtain an education," Hahn said.

GOES TO FLICKS

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Chinese actor Sammy Tong, of the defunct "Bachelor Father" television series, moves over to movies for a featured role in "For Those Who Think Young."

STARS AND STARS: Greta Garbo and Jean Harlow were acknowledged greats of their day. Even such prominent actresses as Doris Day and Elizabeth Taylor may never succeed in rivaling such stardom as this.

Big Name Stars No Longer Around

By DICK KLEINER
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK (NEA) — This, apparently, is the era of the pocket-sized star.

The big names in today's entertainment firmament seem to have much less glow-power than their counterparts of yesterday. Doris Day and Elizabeth Taylor may shine their darndest, but they'll never have the magic of Jean Harlow or Greta Garbo. Rock Hudson is no Clark Gable, James Arness no Gary Cooper, Hayley Mills no Shirley Temple.

Are stars simply less glamorous than before — or is the changing industry making the institution of stardom less vital?

"I don't need stars in a movie today," says director Otto Preminger. "All I need is a good story. The public goes to the box office to see a story, not a star."

"Television is breeding a race of domesticated stars," says Farley Granger. "You see the old movies of Harlow and Gable on the Late Show — they were STARS. They were big. No more. We're not getting people like that nowadays."

Those are the two sides to the question. But there is more to it than those simple statements.

First, just what is a star? Today the word is bandied about loosely. But at least on Broadway, it is closely defined. A star is a person whose name appears above the title of a play. Thus, if a billing reads:

Norton Yucca and Filomena Pflug
in
"Last Night, Tomorrow"
With Hal Intaglio and Gwyneth Esteban

Mr. Yucca and Miss Pflug are stars and Mr. Intaglio and Miss Esteban are classed as featured players.

But movies and television don't hew to the definition. They toss the word around so loosely that it has come to be virtually meaningless. All an actor needs is a card in the Screen Actors' Guild and a press agent and he's called a star.

There are, however, stars and there are Stars. Genuine Stars still exist. It is a combination of box office draw, front page news value and acting ability which sets them apart. These three qualities are often referred to, by theatrical sophisticates, as "chemistry."

"Elizabeth Taylor," they will say, "has the chemistry that makes a star."

Two actors, of roughly the same ability and the same appearance can start at the same time. The public takes to one, not the other. That is star-chemistry working.

And it continues to work today. But the products it is creating are not quite as magical as they once were.

Preminger says it is because the public is more discerning and cares more for a good story than for the actor playing the part. Granger thinks the raw material is not there any more.

Next Week: Who needs stars?

NEW CONTRACT — Tim Rooney, 16-year-old son of actor Mickey Rooney, is shown in court in Los Angeles with his mother, Mrs. Betty Jane Kessel. Young Rooney in court for approval of a new contract with M-G-M studios, revealed that he is beginning to look down on his father. Tim said he is 5 feet 10½ inches tall, while his dad is only 5 feet 2. — UPI Telephoto

King Of Film Lechers, Jack Lemmon, Really Is Ordinary, Colorless Fellow

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Harvard graduate Jack Lemmon is king of the celluloid lechers, a peeping tom, and roue.

If he didnt have the face of a choir boy he might be in trouble.

In four of his recent pictures, "Some Like It Hot," "The Apartment," "Irma La Douce" and "Under the Yum - Yum Tree," he was a combination Bluebeard and bungling Casanova. He was also hilarious.

All Hits

All four pictures were runaway hits, "Irma" and "Yum-Yum" are running neck-and-neck for top box-office honors right now.

If there were any similarity between Lemmon and the roles he plays the actor might be imperiled by outraged mothers, righteous watch and ward societies and the clergy. Fortunately, Jack has almost no identification in the public mind when he is off screen.

"People don't know a damn thing about me as a person," he said, not without humor. "And I'm glad of it.

"Any identity I have with the public is through my work. And I've been lucky with audience reaction and good parts."

Lemmon's personal life is as unspectacular as any star's can be. He lives quietly in Beverly Hills with his wife, actress Felicia Farr; minds his own business and rarely is gossiped about.

"I guess I look like what I am—the average guy from anywhere," he grinned. "I'm not handsome. I'm not ugly. I have no regional accent. And you might say I'm colorless."

Despite his frequent roles as an evil young man (for laughs), Lemmon contends that he's not type-cast.

About Face

"In my new picture, 'Good Neighbor Sam,' I play the exact opposite of a lech. I'm a family man who couldn't go wrong if he tried. As Sam I'm honest and moral and decent. In 'Yum-Yum' I was a buffoon, a nut that no one could take seriously."

Like Lemmon and Groucho, David Niven and Peter Sellers can play amorous skirt-chasers because the possibility of any real conquest appears patently ridiculous.

It's Lemmon's belief that so long as the actor limits himself to a gleam in his eye, rather than a leer, he can get away with murder.

"My next two pictures are comedy—'How To Murder Your Wife' and 'The Great Race.' I don't play a dirty old man in either one of them."

That fact, plus his Oscar nomination for "Days of Wine and Roses" last year, encourages Jack to believe that he isn't too closely associated with unsavory screen characters. And that's the way he wants it.

King Kong's Girl Friend Now On TV

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Quick, who was King Kong's very first girl friend?

If you guessed Fay Wray, you've been watching the late, late show.

Miss Wray, who spent most of her time in "King Kong" screaming her lungs out and flailing her tiny fists against the big ape, soon will be seen in a segment of video's "Eleventh Hour" with nary a scream in the script.

She will, in fact, be playing Fabian's mother.

It's a long, long way from Kong to Fabe (who wasn't even born when the famed thriller was filmed) but Fay has survived both co-stars with remarable aplomb.

Back With Ralph

Still lovely in her mid-50s, the dark-haired actress reported to MGM for her television role and was delighted to discover she would be playing scenes with Ralph Bellamy (the show's co-star). She and Bellamy shared top billing in movies during the 1930s.

"It's nice to be working again," she said during the noon break in the Metro commissary. "You never really forget how to act, so it seemed to me as if I'd never really been away.

"I retired for 10 years between 1942 and 1953, and since then I've worked off and on in movies and television. I devoted those 10 years to bringing up my family."

Miss Wray is widowed. Her husband was Robert Riskin, distinguished screen writer of "It Happened One Night" and other hits. Their three children are grown now, leaving Fay to resume her career.

"The children didn't know I'd been in movies until they saw some of my old pictures on television," she said. "I wanted them to lead normal lives. But when they saw some of those oldies they were fascinated."

Other than King Kong, Fay's leading men included Ronald Colman, Spenser Tracy, Cary Grant, Wallace Beery and Gary Cooper, the best in the business. But the outsized ape or gorilla, or whatever he was, has overshadowed every other co-star with whom Fay ever shared a marquee.

Can't Live It Down

For 30 years Fay has had to live down her role with King Kong.

"It used to bother me," she sighed, still not altogether unbothered. "I had been in pictures for years but the only movie people seemed to remember was 'King Kong.'

"It's had about 17 general releases over the years and is shown on television all the time."
