Church Membership Reaches All-Time High

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Membership in U.S. churches has climbed to an all-time high of 117,946,000, despite a sharp slump in the growth rate of Protestant denominations.

The 1964 yearbook of American churches published by the National Council of Churches and based on official statistics from 252 religious bodies, showed a total membership of 64,929,941 for 222 Protestant denominations. This represented an increase of slightly less than .8 per cent over last year's figure.

A membership of 43,847,938 was reported for the Roman Catholic church, an increase of 2.3 per cent over the total shown in the 1963 yearbook.

The Protestant growth rate was only half as great as the normal increase in the U.S. population, which averages 1.6 per cent a year. But the Catholic figures pulled up the overall increase in church membership to 1.6 per cent — precisely keeping pace with population growth.

Assassination Shook Up State Primary System

SALEM (UPI) — The political pulse recorders in the secretary of state's office here were thrown into temporary confusion by the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Until the tragedy in Dallas, it was expected the Republicans would have a wide open race in the May 15 Oregon primary—but everyone conceded Kennedy would get the nod from the Democrats.

Now the Democrats face a possible battle, and everyone expects the lineup of Republican candidates may be significantly affected.

Because of its unique election law, the Oregon primary may be one of the most significant in the nation in the pre-convention jockeying for strength.

Under Oregon law, the secretary of state arbitrarily lists on the ballot whomever he considers is "generally advocated."

To determine who is being advocated he has assigned his staff to check the daily newspapers and national magazines to keep track of the changing national political pulse.

Picture Changed

Observers didn't think Appling, a Republican, was spending much time seeking out possible Democratic candidates. It was assumed the Democrats wanted Kennedy to run for a second term.

While President Lyndon Johnson now tops the list of Democratic candidates, observers can't yet guess who else might get on the list—if anyone.

Appling will announce his ballot list March 6.

Oregon was conceded by many Republicans to be "Goldwater country" before the tragedy in Dallas. Many observers now feel Goldwater's strength has been severely weakened.

Appling adamently refuses to speculate as to whom he might list on the primary ballot. He said speculation could affect the campaign plans of candidates.

The Oregon law was changed before the 1960 election to make the state's primary more meaningful. The new law is designed to eliminate favorite sons, publicity seekers and self starters, and to offer the voters a real selection among the most prominently mentioned hopefuls.

Shortly before Kennedy's assassination, Gov. Mark Hatfield urged all Republican hopefuls to enter the Oregon primary. Hatfield who has been mentioned both as a GOP vice presidential, and presidential possibility, has remained neutral in the Republican power struggle.

Hatfield expects to head the Oregon delegation to the July GOP national convention in San Francisco. In Oregon, convention delegates are elected, and must support the winner of the state's primary.

FBI Places Gunman On '10' List

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Arthur William Couts, a tattooed and trigger-happy bandit, was placed Friday on the FBI's list of 10 most wanted criminals.

Couts, 32, has been sought by police since July 17 when he and an accomplice held up a grocery store in Philadelphia at gunpoint, threatening to kill a cashier. The FBI describes him as violence prone and extremely dangerous.

The wanted man is both scarred and tattooed. There is an S-shaped cut scar on the little finger of his right hand and others on his face and both thighs.

On his upper right arm is a tattoo of twin hearts inscribed "mother" and "father." An American flag, an eagle and a scroll with the inscription "USA" are on his upper left arm. Tattooed on his chest are a rose, an American flag and the name "Josephine."

5 Years After Birth, America's Jet Age Has Overcome Pessimistic Predictions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Five years ago this month, a Pan American World Airways Boeing 707 took off on a New York-Paris flight that marked the birth of America's jet age.

Accompanying the plane on that Oct. 26, 1958, flight were a number of pessimistic predictions about jet transports, to wit:

—At more than $5 million per aircraft, they were too expensive to make money and too big for passenger demand.

—They were too fast to fit into the antiquated air traffic control system and collisions were inevitable.

—They were too tricky to fly because of their swept-back wings and enormous weight.

—They exposed crew and customers to such high altitude hazards as cosmic rays, poisonous ozone and radioactive fallout.

At the time of Pan Am's inaugural jet flight across the Atlantic, the airline had only two 707's. Five years later, the nation's 11 major airlines were operating more than 400 jets. From their half-decade of experience has come impressive proof that all the pessimistic predictions were far off course.

No airline has yet to amortize its jetliner purchases. In their early stages they had to be flown at least three-fourths full to make any money, but gradually, the airlines have reduced jet operating costs to the point where they can at least break even with only a half-load and some carriers can earn profits with a jet only 45 per cent full.

As for public acceptance of what was a radically different plan five years ago, the jets from the very start smothered propeller-driven planes on all competing runs. Today, seven out of every though only one airliner out of 10 air passengers fly by jet even six is a pure jet.

Too fast? In five years, there has been only one collision involving a jet—a United DC8 and a TWA Constellation over New York in December, 1960. A top Federal Aviation Agency (FAA) spokesman says: "The safe handling of jet traffic has surpassed all expectations and while there still are problems, it's getting better all the time."

Safety? The jets actually have a better safety record than piston-engine planes, mainly because of the airlines' ruthless "fly 'em by the book" training programs. Engine reliability is up to 20 times superior to the pistons. Since 1958, there have been only four fatal accidents involving jets operated by U.S. airlines on scheduled flights, one of them the collision mentioned.

The four accidents took 237 lives, underlining the inescapable fact that the death toll can be extremely high when a giant jet does crash. Despite those 237 fatalities, the jet fatality rate over the past five years has been about 20 per cent under that of propeller-driven transports.

Unknown medical hazards? One of the nation's leading experts on aviation medicine, Dr. George Kidera of United Air Lines, gives this rundown:

—There is absolutely no evidence that jet crews and passengers have been exposed to dangerous high altitude radioactivity. United equipped two DC8's with special radioactive monitoring devices, one plane flying the Pacific, the other domestic routes. A third device was installed in Kidera's own office parked safely on the ground. The one of his office showed almost the same level of radioactivity exposure as the two airborne instruments.

United repeated the test shortly after the Russians exploded a 50 megaton H-bomb and in the wake of reports that radioactive debris was floating around at 30,000-40,000 feet — the altitudes frequently used by jets. The second tests showed the same radioactive level as the earlier ones. Similar tests discounted the menace of ozone, a toxic gas formed by exposure of oxygen to ultra violet rays.

POLLY'S POINTERS
Modesty Measure

POLLY CRAMER
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

DEAR POLLY—For dresses that gap at the front neckline and are too revealing, take a piece of whaleboning about six inches long, tack it just inside the middle of the front neck and tuck it inside the bra. This holds such a neckline in place very satisfactorily for me. —MRS. M.L.S.

DEAR POLLY—When packing for our last camping trip, I cut off the tops from my son's worn, heavyweight socks and made jackets to stretch around small glass jars of food to go on the trip. They pack this way without danger of breaking. I also used the bottom halves of the socks for other jars even though the knitting is not quite as thick.—PEGGY

DEAR POLLY—To get more light from the ceiling light bulbs in your basement or garage, use an empty aluminum pie plate. Place it upside down with the light bulb coming through a hole cut in the center of the plate. The plate throws all the light down. —MRS. H. A.

GIRLS—Be sure plate doesn't touch a brass or other metal socket.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—With our four lively youngsters and 16 years of doing laundry behind me, I still appreciate a trick learned long ago. Whenever possible I buy all white socks, shirts, handkerchiefs, etc., so my wash days are not "blue." I can toss all these items in one load and there is no worry about sorting. If bleaching is necessary, there are still no worries.

Here is another addition to the useful tips on discarded garden hose. When we were youngsters, my dad always cut strips the length of our ice skate blades. No cost and lots of protection as any skater knows.—MRS. H.W.D.

DEAR POLLY—When a child first starts to sleep in a bed, store the crib mattress under the bed and pull it out when he goes to sleep to help ease any possible bumps he may get from falling out of bed.

When typing a single copy of anything, the use of a backing sheet will make it easier to make any necessary erasures. —MRS. M.S.

DEAR POLLY — Do tell the quilters that if they use Mrs. J.S.E.'s hint for dropping a spool of quilting thread in paraffin to be sure and remove the wrapper from the end of the spool or they will end with colored thread. Also, thanks for saying quilting is not just for the elderly. I am 51 and have been quilting 30 years and my mother, 75, still quilts. We keep a quilting frame up all the time and keep a sheet thrown over the quilt that is being worked on so it does not get dusty. Cotton batting makes a pretty good quilt but it is much better to use a sheet blanket as a liner if one quilts with big hoops which tend to tear the cotton batting. We always use blankets to line children's quilts which are washed so often.—MRS. R.W.B.

Duncan Offers VA Legislation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Robert Duncan, D-Ore., has introduced legislation to liberalize restrictions placed on veterans' pensions, he said Friday.

The Fourth District Congressman said his bill is aimed at helping veterans of World War I.

"The major objective of my bill is to introduce a measure that can be passed and will provide additional benefits for aged and needy veterans while there is still time for them to enjoy it," he said.

Coinword Puzzle Still Awaits Solving, $2,500 Prize Goes Unclaimed Again

EXPLANATIONS ACROSS

1. In need of a warm SHELTER, the driver of an open car would certainly put up the top until he found one. He could be driving in the South and need a warm SWEATER for a trip north next week and simply be looking for a shop.

2. One might find a lost CAMEO in the dessert or final course of a meal if it had fallen there. One might find a lost CAMEL in the desert but not in ones dessert.

7. A FRAMED piece of embroidery might be very valuable and hence be placed under glass. Many pieces of worthless embroidery are FRAYED and worn.

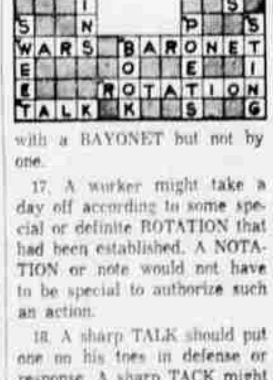
8. The owner of a squeaky car could wish he had a FLUID or oil for lubrication. A FLAIR or aptitude for lubrication would do him no good if he had no oil.

9. When moisture RETS or soaks a piece of timber, those performing the task would probably ret the next piece. When moisture ROTS a piece of timber, a new piece may never be substituted.

11. The old-fashioned GOUT with painful joints is called arthritis today. On old-fashioned BOUT with painful joints could have been due to an injury and could not be arthritis.

15. If man is to survive, civilization must abolish evil WARS that can bring about total destruction. Civilization will probably never abolish all evil WAYS.

16. The wall of a castle could be decorated by a BARONET who was talented in decorating. They could also be decorated with a BAYONET but not by one.



17. A worker might take a day off according to some special or definite ROTATION that had been established. A NOTATION or note would not have to be special to authorize such an action.

18. A sharp TALK should put one on his toes in defense or response. A sharp TACK might put one on his heels if it were under his toes.

EXPLANATIONS DOWN

2. When they ENACT or institute a toll, highway commissions should use discretion in the amount they charge. When they EXACT or take it, they have already established discretion or failed to do so.

3. Holding a TREY or three of any kind, a man might pull himself out of a hole during a bridge game. It would be almost impossible to hold a TREE while one was down in a hole unless the TREE had fallen.

4. An elderly person could find a long HALL rather tiring to walk. If he were riding, a long HAUL might not be as exhausting.

5. A salesman with a TEDIOUS or tiresome approach would not be likely to sell much. With a DEVIOUS or round-about approach, he might succeed very well.

7. The cry of "FORE!" may indicate danger from a golf ball. The cry of "FIRE!" could be merely a command during target practice.

10. A good golfer keeps his eye on the ball when he SPINS it to evaluate his shot. He may expect his caddy to keep his eye on the ball when he SPIES or sees it.

12. Threats will sometimes make guilty people SWEET in their attempt to get out of the situation. They can also make guilty people angry but seldom actually SWEAT or perspire.

13. Important POETS are usually well paid. Sentries at a military base have important POSTS but are not necessarily well paid.

14. A little STING or pain may be an obligation we cannot avoid. A little STINT could be a sandpiper and no obligation to anyone.

16. In a small town, a persuasive writer might create quite a BOOK having a quiet opportunity to write. If his book could create a BOOM or growth financially in a small town, it should do likewise almost anywhere else.
