"HOW COME HE SEEMS SO MUCH LARGER WHEN HE'S AWAKE?"

Husband Wants To Play Obstetrician

By ANN LANDERS
 Dear Ann Landers: My husband is extremely imaginative and an avid do-it-yourself fan.

He built his own outboard motor, and when he broke his arm skiing last year he even set it himself. The doctor congratulated him on a remarkably fine job.

We are expecting our first child in four months. I've read it is far better to have a baby at home than in a hospital, and that the infant who is born at home gets love and attention from his first moments of life, which is terribly important.

I have telephoned every obstetrician in this town and no one will deliver my baby at home. My husband has been reading books on delivering babies and he says he knows he can do it. We want to know what special obstetrical equipment we may need for a home birth. And . . . can it be obtained at a drug store?—J. L.

Dear J. L.: Babies are born at home, in taxis, on buses and heaven knows where every day, but usually it's because the mother can't get to the hospital soon enough.

No woman in her right mind would allow her husband to deliver her child as a Do-It-Yourself Project.

You just might need a blood transfusion, an oxygen tank or an incubator and you can't buy these things in the drug store.

Dear Ann Landers: My mother and dad are having a terrible argument. We just moved into this nice house last May. Mom has worked like a slave fixing it up. She hung all the wallpaper, did the painting and even put down a tile floor. Now dad wants to sell the house. He says he knows he can make a nice profit.

This is the third house mom has fixed up in five years and she is furious. In the two previous cases dad sold our houses without even asking her. He has our "next house" all picked out. It is only two blocks from here so he insists the move will be a cinch. The house he has picked out is an old barn but he says mom can do wonders with it, as she has with all the others. Mom is dead tired and she asked me to write for advice.—ON HER SIDE

Dear On: Married people should own their home jointly, which would make it impossible for one party to sell it without the consent of the other.

Some women love to fix up old homes and sell them, but since your mother considers it a hardship she should not be made to do it.

P.S. And tell your dad that moving to a home two blocks away is just as much work as moving to Hong Kong.

Dear Ann Landers: I was first attracted to Agnes because she was witty and full of pep. When my parents met her they were shocked. They told me they did not like her at all—that she was uncouth and boisterous.

Last week we attended a football game and Ag started a conversation with some strange men who were sitting next to us. On the bus she did the same thing. She frequently does this in restaurants.

I've told her that this sort of familiarity with strangers embarrasses me. She claims she has a naturally out-going personality and if I don't like it I can lump it.

What do you say? —LUMP-ING

Dear Lump: Ag's "out-going personality" should not be going out to people she doesn't know.

Girls who strike up conversations with strange men give the impression they are looking for new friends—and I think, Buddy boy, that's precisely what you ought to do.
