COWBOY "ACTOR" — William Hickman Hill Jr., grandson of cowboy star Tom Mix, makes his acting debut with James Arness (Marshal Dillon) on the set of CBS-TV's "Gunsmoke" in Hollywood. Son Of Tom Mix, Real-Life Cowboy, Will Try Hand At Acting On 'Gunsmoke'

HOLLYWOOD

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —Here's a hick you've got to admire.

His real name is Hickman Hill. He's the grandson of the great cowboy star Tom Mix. He is in Hollywood to make his acting debut in a segment of television's "Gunsmoke."

Hick (that's his nickname) will play a cowboy, which is a good thing because that's what he is in real life down in Laredo, Texas.

Hick, 19, landed in Hollywood this week after his first and last — airplane ride. With his adam's apple jumping up and down like a yo-yo, Hick said he'd never get on another plane.

"It was terrible," he said, scuffing his cowboy boots against the table leg in fancy Scandia Restaurant. "We were up 31,000 feet and going 500 miles an hour. That's too high and fast for me. I'm going back by train."

Tall and Handsome

Hick Hill is a tall, handsome kid in a raw-boned kind of way whose hands and feet seem too big for the rest of him.

He's clear-eyed, straight forward and knows nothing about acting.

Cynically or not, a public relations firm and CBS brought him to Hollywood essentially to plug "Gunsmoke." But Hick (and isn't it a good thing he didn't take his grandfather's name, winding up as Hick Mix?) will be paid $1300 for his acting chores.

"That's a lotta money," he grinned.

"As a cowboy on my father's ranch (6,000 acres) my wages are only $5 a day — just like the other cowhands. 'Course, when we're irrigating I make $6 a day, but we work seven days a week."

Hick's papa runs between 2,000 and 4,000 head of steer. Hick rides herd, mends fences, digs post holes, brands cattle and vaccinates the critters.

He never knew his famed grandfather who died in a 1940 automobile crash. But he's seen some of his old movies and admires his mother's father as a fine actor. This opportunity to appear on television has ignited within Hick the hope of becoming an actor himself.

Sitting in the restaurant, his stetson stampeder hat at his side, young Hick looked every inch a cowboy.

"I'd like to become an actor and wear western clothes, just like we do down home," Hick said. "Ranching is a lot of fun but it sure isn't anything like you see in movies and TV.

"Out on the ranch we don't carry no guns or guitars, and there's no romance like galloping along on your pony and riding off with a girl. When I meet up with a girl I like to be afoot."

When Hick was approached for his small role a letter had to be dispatched to the ranch. There is no telephone.

"The nearest phone is 12 miles away," Hick explained. "But we don't miss it much. It'd cost us $500 a mile to get a telephone strung out to us. And I don't know of anybody worth hearing from at those prices."

Hazel's Boss Has No Maid At Home

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Don DeFore, the harried householder of television's "Hazel" series, has a bigger home, a larger family and more pets than he does in the show. But he doesn't have a maid to compare with Hazel.

In fact, Don and his family have no "live-in" help at all.

The only Hazel in the DeFore menage is a tiny Australian Silkie terrier by that name.

Off-screen and on, DeFore is the prototype of the American family man. He resembles the ad man's conception of the businessman debarking from a commuter train, attache case in hand, to greet his wife in the station wagon.

But that isn't the way it works in real life.

Don drives the 10 miles from the studio to his Mandeville Canyon home in a new automobile, courtesy of his sponsor (Ford).

Has Own Car

True, there's a station wagon in the driveway, but it was purchased by the actor. And the house is such that George Baxter — DeFore's television character — couldn't begin to afford it.

A mansion by any standards, the home includes five bedrooms and five baths. DeFore had it built 18 years ago in what he calls a combination New England-Iowa farm house style. It's red with white trim and a shake roof. It nestles cozily on two acres of prime suburbia with a freeform swimming pool and a little red barn with attached silo which doubles as guest house and pool house.

Much of the furniture was turned out by Papa DeFore in his workshop. Woodworking was his hobby until three weeks after the "Hazel" show made its debut. A power saw almost lopped off one of his fingers, so Don has spent less time playing cabinetmaker.

Don is particularly proud of his den. Everything in it relates to railroad lore. His father was a railroad engineer.

The coffee table is made up of old railroad ties fastened to a length of track. It took the actor a year to bleach the ties and bolt them together.

The DeFore clan is a large one. The children are Penny, 19; David, 18; Dawn, 15; Ronald, 13; and Amy, 4. Penny lives at a sorority house at the University of Southern California, but the others swarm all over the place.

A recent development in family enterprise has Mrs. DeFore (Marion) in a dither. Sons David and Ronald are raising white mice and rats in the garage.

"They hope to set up a business, selling them to clinics and hospitals," DeFore sighs, "but I don't know."

Because George Baxter is supposed to live in the east, DeFore finds it necessary to have two complete wardrobes. In the series he wears tab collars and a Homburg with trim, Ivy League suits. His own clothes are more casual.

"Around the house I'm a slacks and sports shirt man," he says.

Don's life is easier than many a series star. Most of the time he works only four days a week. His hours are from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. He's home for dinner every night and prefers steaks, roasts and Norwegian dishes, which Marion prepares.

The DeFores entertain often. Their friends are a cross section of show business and just plain folks. In addition to acting, DeFore has several outside business interests, including a restaurant and a mercantile concern.

This year he bought half an acre of land on Lake Millerton near Fresno, Calif., as a summer vacation hangout for the family.

This spring a cottage will be built on the site for year-round sports activities — swimming, boating and water skiing in the hot months; fishing and hunting in season.

Mary Martin Was Instant Success In Broadway Debut 25 Years Ago

NEW YORK (UPI)—A quarter of a century ago on an evening in late fall, a girl who had never been on Broadway before stood on stage wrapped in lynx jacket and little else and sang a song called "My Heart Belongs to Daddy."

The song stopped the show and turned into an overnight Cinderella the girl from Weatherford, Tex. who sang it in "Leave It to Me."

For Mary Martin, that night started a long love affair with Broadway and one which promises to continue for some time to come.

"No, I have no plans to retire," said Miss Martin, a grandmother of two with a third on the way.

"Only to retreat," said the star whose luster goes on undimmed.

"Richard and I are seriously considering not doing anything for a couple of years after 'Jennie,'" she said. "That's our dream anyway, just to go to our farm in Brazil and catch up. That's the story of my life. I've never had time to catch up."

"But I know what'll happen," she smiled. "Someone will ask us to read a script and we won't be able to resist..."

Miss Martin's current starring vehicle is "Jennie," a musical based on the early life of the actress Laurette Taylor. She has a run of play contract.

Her husband of 22 years is Richard Halliday, who also is her manager and a producer in his own right. That farm she mentioned is about 50 miles from Brasilia, Brazil's capital city.

"I haven't the vaguest idea how many acres," said Miss Martin. "We keep saying it's so far away, we ought to sell. But each time we go down we buy some more."

Anniversary

The actress said she had forgotten all about this year marking the 25th anniversary of her Broadway debut. But the cast and production staff of "Jennie" didn't.

She recalled that it was a matinee day and "I'd gotten up with a toothache...a wisdom tooth that came out later...and was worrying about getting through the day. When the final curtain came down, I started home as usual, when someone yelled, 'Hey, you're wanted on stage.'"

Said Miss Martin, "I got out there and here was the biggest cake you ever saw...with 25 candles on it."

To help commemorate the event, the producer of that first show, Vinton Freedly, was on hand.

Miss Martin has a son, Larry, by a previous marriage and she and Halliday have one daughter, Heller. Larry, 30, married and the father of two tots, is an actor and currently is working on a picture being filmed in Yugoslavia.

Bigger Ham

"He's a bigger ham than I am, if that's possible," said his mother.

Daughter Heller, 21, married to Anthony Weir, an advertising agency executive, is expecting her first child in June. And, said her mom, "she couldn't care less about the stage. All she wants is to be a wife and mother.

"Me mind being a grandma three times? Heavens no. The more the merrier."

Monkeys Puff Away To Aid Research Team

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A research team from the Albert Einstein College of Medicine, New York, hopes monkeys can teach man something about his smoking habits.

Elizabeth K. van Laer, a psychologist, and Murry E. Jarvik, a pharmacologist, reported at a meeting here of the American Society for Pharmacology and Experimental Therapeutics that they induced monkeys to become habitual cigarette smokers.

Now they hope to find out — by substracting substances from cigarette smoke one by one — what it is the monkey, and presumably humans, craves in cigarette smoke.

Since the monkeys tend to eat the cigarettes when handed a pack, the researchers rigged up a smoking device with a mouthpiece projecting into the monkey's cage.

The monkey was then taught to suck the mouthpiece if he wanted to smoke. However, he had choice — another mouthpiece which just fed him hot air.

Dr. van Laer reported the monkeys developed a strong taste for cigarette smoke in two days, and summed it up this way:

"The results taken together indicate that something exists in tobacco smoke or in the volatile products of tobacco which can act as a positive incentive for monkeys, so that they will spend some time during the day smoking in preference to other possible activities available."

Veronica Lake Proves Real Stardom Is Lasting

(Last of Three Dispatches.)
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK (NEA) — Until the fall of 1963, it had been five years since Veronica Lake had made a public appearance. And it was 13 years since her last movie.

But the public never forgot the tiny beauty with the slim figure and cascading platinum hair. Far from it. She says that she was continually recognized wherever she went, even though time had made the inevitable changes in her lovely face.

Her case is worth examining, for she was perhaps the last person to get the Grade - A buildup in Hollywood. And she is proof that full-fledged stardom appears to be lasting. It's like an appendicitis scar; once you acquire it, it's yours forever.

"I was an overnight star," Miss Lake says. "I never had to struggle. After a very few bit parts, I did 'I Wanted Wings' with William Holden. I was a star the day that picture was released."

Eventually, she grew tired of the artificial life that, she says, she was forced to live.

"I quit Hollywood," she says, "when I realized I had to choose between being a human being and one of the living dead. I chose being a human being. I haven't been in the state of California since."

Actually, while Miss Lake quit stardom, stardom didn't quit her. She says that she continually had to turn down offers to return. She had to sign autographs wherever she went.

Over the past few years, the urge to return to acting has grown in her gradually. But she admits she was "scared." One day young off-Broadway producer Arthur Whitelaw called her. "He needed a replacement for his hit revival of "Best Foot Forward." He asked her what she looked like these days.

"I'm 40," said Miss Lake, with her usual candor, "but in a good light I look a few years younger."

The result of the conversation was that Miss Lake returned to show business in "Best Foot Forward" and loved it.

"Now that the hinges are oiled," she says, "I don't want them to get rusty again."

The box office reflected the still-potent drawing ability of Miss Lake. Even though she is now a grandmother—"and proud of it.

now," she says. "I've been a mother. I was built something like a boy before. No more."

Such are the stars who made it years ago—in the era when the silver screen was pure gold. The stars of today don't have the same staying power.

Do you think you'll remember Dorothy Provine 13 years after The Roaring '20s?

TO FILM NOVEL

NEW YORK (UPI) — Film rights of a new novel, "Seconds," by David Ely, published by Random House, have been purchased for $175,000 by star Kirk Douglas' Joel Productions and director John Frankenheimer. Filming is planned for next March, with Douglas' appearance in the cast depending upon whether he is free of other commitments at the time.
