Penalty Call Is Costly

By OSWALD JACOBY
 Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
 One of my most unusual mistakes of 1963 was when I called the wrong penalty. I was South, and if you want to see my problem just look at the South hand.

I opened one no-trump and was promptly raised to three. Everyone passed and East led the six of spades out of turn. The game was duplicate and I could accept the lead, whereupon dummy would go right down on the table; I could demand a lead of a spade or forbid a lead of a spade or West or I could simply treat that six of spades as a penalty card.

None of these choices was particularly appealing, but I finally decided that I would accept that spade lead. Perhaps my partner would have something in the suit. The sure did not fall on me, but I surely had made the worst possible choice.

Dummy showed up with the queen of spades, but unfortunately it was a singleton. West played his ace and returned the suit and spades were established against me.

Of course, I did have 10 top tricks and proceeded to run them off, but had I barred the spade lead I would surely have made at least one trick more than I did gather and in duplicate those extra tricks are right important.

While this article is on mistakes I want to point out that my partner's raise to three no-trump was the correct bid with his hand. We were playing duplicate and there was no reason for him to suggest a diamond game.

 Double Pass 1♠ Pass

You, South, hold:

 What do you do?
 A—Pass. Your partner will surely open a diamond and you can expect at least a two trick penalty.

TODAY'S QUESTION
 Instead of doubling three hearts your partner has passed. What do you do now?
