Governor Backs Need For CD Unit

SALEM (UPI) — Gov. Mark Hatfield says the need for a state civil defense organization was not eliminated "because we tinkered up a substitute and put the job on the backs of a lot of people."

At a news conference Monday, he repeated his support for civil defense, and again went on record as opposing the use of convict labor on major construction projects.

Hatfield said the Christmas week and January floods proved the need for civil defense.

He said that from Tuesday of last week to Monday, two men — the civil defense director and radio operator—kept the communications center open around the clock.

Bad Conditions

"People don't expect to work under those conditions," Hatfield said. "We certainly wouldn't tolerate those hours in private industry.

"Maybe we need legislation to correct abuses of public labor just like early this century we needed child labor laws," the governor said.

He noted that the processing of Christmas week flood reports had to be halted during the January flooding, and said a larger CD organization was needed to plan for natural disaster relief.

"Just because we tinkered up a substitute and came out looking good doesn't eliminate the need for some such organization, either a separate agency or as part of a department of public safety," Hatfield said.

Quick Decision Sought On Reapportionment

SALEM (UPI) — Hopes for quick approval of a congressional redistricting bill were voiced Monday by Rep. Robert Packwood, R-Portland.

Packwood's House Elections Committee, which has the task of approving a bill, began hearings on the subject by listening to the director of the State Bureau of Census and sponsors of four reapportionment bills.

"The parties are going to have to reach a decision (on which bill to support) in caucus," Packwood said. "That bill is going to come out of committee and what'll happen to it on the floor I don't know."

"I can't see why this should take very long," Packwood said. But he admitted that both parties might have trouble reaching a decision in their caucuses.

Where To Change

Basically, the problem appeared to be whether the committee would add Southern Oregon, Marion and Linn counties, or Eastern Multnomah and Clackamas counties to Eastern Oregon to bring Oregon's present second district population into line with that in the other three districts.

Dr. Earl MacCannel, director of the State Board of Census, said his agency was forecasting a population increase of 500,000 in the next 15 years. He predicted that the major growth would continue in the Portland area, the Willamette Valley and the Rogue River Valley, with a lesser increase in Eastern Oregon, and the coastal areas lagging behind.

Rep. Betty Roberts, D - Portland, whose plan puts Marion and Linn counties in with Eastern Oregon, said that area has "more identity with Eastern Oregon" because of its agricultural economy. She said any district which might put heavily-populated eastern Multnomah county in with the eastern part of the state "might create a real conflict of interest."

Status Quo Liked

Rep. Don McKinnis, D-Summerville, probably the most reluctant bill sponsor in the session, told the committee, "if I had my way we'd continue the status quo."

But the Eastern Oregon legislator, who favors including Eastern Multnomah and Clackamas counties in the enlarged district, pointed out that most roads from Eastern Oregon lead to Portland.

Rep. John Mosser, R-Beaverton, who has introduced a bill putting Jackson, Josephine, Coos and Curry counties into the second district, said those counties have a greater "community of interest" with Eastern Oregon. He cited common interests in agriculture, timber and mining.

The sponsor of the most unique plan for redistricting, Sen. Vernon Cook, D-Gresham, attacked talk about sectional differences. Cooks plan would divide the state into three districts extending from Idaho to the ocean, and construct the fourth district out of western Multnomah County.

"I question the uniqueness of Eastern Oregon," he said, adding "I consider it to be a myth that where a candidate lives decides his success or failure. He said there is no surer way to continue "this unfriendly argument" than to leave Eastern Oregon in one large block.

Solons Plan Bank Probes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate investigators plan to look into the failure of several federally insured banks said to have fallen into the hands of "persons of unsavory character."

Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., chairman of the Senate investigations subcommittee, made the disclosure today in a letter justifying the panel's $435,000 spending request. The spending authorization, along with those of other committees, awaited Senate approval.

McClellan's letter did not specify any specific banks or savings and loan associations in disclosing the committee's interest. It said the committee's investigation "will involve only banking institutions insured by agencies of the federal government."

"The subcommittee's attention has been directed to the substantial increase in the number of closed and financially unsound federally insured banking institutions during the past two years. The cause of the closing of these banks and savings and loan associations has been attributed to persons of unsavory character and principles acting in concert to gain control of the stock and management of the institution then causing its downfall," McClellan said.

"Once these groups gain control of the stock and management of the bank or savings and loan association, there followed a rapid deterioration of the assets of the institution and failure of the bank or savings and loan institution," McClellan said, adding that his panel would try to determine whether tighter federal regulations are required.

DOESN'T PAY

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — George Sebring found out that it doesn't pay to help a friend in need.

Sebring brought a bail bondsman to the Santa Clara County jail to free Ray Allen Tartar, 23. Police noticed that Sebring fit a description of Tartar's alleged companion in several robberies and he was arrested. Tartar was freed on bond, but Sebring stayed in jail.
