

Rude Girl Rejects Gift From Would-Be Friend

By ANN LANDERS
Dear Ann Landers: A woman on your office is as sweet as honey on the surface but the minute I see a back turned she does her dirty work. She exag-gerates un-likely incidents be-cause a juicy morsel of gossip. Last week I had a birthday. This woman came by my desk with a gift. I was so stunned I could do nothing but thank her. After a few moments I regained my composure and returned the gift — unopened. I told her I could not accept it.

She asked why and I said, "A gift should be given to a friend by a friend." She replied, "But I am your friend." I told her I didn't think of her that way.

Now I'm afraid I was a little rude. What do you think? DEAR UNDECIDED: You were not rude. You were cruel. What a heartless thing to do if you were victimized by this woman's sharp tongue.

Third, see your clergyman about some joint-counseling. A woman who goes to PTA and church meetings and to lectures isn't to be satisfied because she is a good figure and has given me four children. I need your help—STEADY READER.

Dear Steady: First, keep your home together—for four very good reasons.

Second, you hire a competent housekeeper.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 19-year-old boy. I am glad my parents live close enough to yell at me when I do something wrong. I used to think they were just mean, but I know a lot better now. Good parents are supposed to make rules and see to it that their kids follow them. I have a friend whose parents let him do anything he wants to do and honestly, Ann Landers, the kid is a mess. He always is trouble.

Last night a girl called me on the phone and asked me to be her date at a party. I know my mother and she said, "The answer is no and that goes for the next three years."

The chamber contends it has accumulated debris, much of it remnants of the 1955 flood, that caused heavy property losses and rendered vast areas of agricultural land unproductive.

A resolution has been passed by the chamber calling attention to the continuing hazard of clogged river and stream channels to downstream areas. The resolution notes minimal work done in the past by the U.S. Army Engineers has not provided adequate safeguards.

Representatives of the U.S. Army Engineers and government officials have been asked to meet with the Scott Valley Chamber of Commerce on Monday evening, Feb. 8, to discuss a flood debris cleanup program.

The disastrous Northern California flood has had its beginning in the tributary streams of the Scott River where flood waters spread over Scott Valley before channeling into the Scott River Canyon, roaring into the Klamath River and picking up momentum and volume on its course to the Pacific Ocean.

Klamath Sixth Graders Join In Forest Tours

Sixth graders of Klamath County were among more than 21,000 Oregon school children and adults who went into "outdoor classrooms" during 1964 to learn about the wise use of the state's natural resources during school forest conservation tours, according to a report compiled by Oregon State University.

The local tour was held last year on Weyerhaeuser Timber Company property at Doak Mountain and came under the sponsorship of foresters, state and federal agencies and private industry.

Conservation tours also were held in 20 other Oregon counties, with nearly 18,500 school children, mostly sixth graders, participating.

Bakersfield River, Deschutes and Jefferson counties held tours for the first time last year, with Deschutes and Jefferson forming forces in a joint venture.

In all, counties participating held tours during 56 days on 34 sites, not including Multnomah County which offers teachers and students a self-guided resource tour through the Portland Area Forest Park under the Portland Area Resource Education Tour plan.

Scott Group Asks Cash For Repair

ETNA, Calif.—Funds for removal of debris to the high water marks of the December floods will be asked of the federal agencies by the Scott Valley Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber contends it has accumulated debris, much of it remnants of the 1955 flood, that caused heavy property losses and rendered vast areas of agricultural land unproductive.

A resolution has been passed by the chamber calling attention to the continuing hazard of clogged river and stream channels to downstream areas.

The resolution notes minimal work done in the past by the U.S. Army Engineers has not provided adequate safeguards.
