

MARKETS and FINANCE

Stocks WALL STREET

NEW YORK STOCKS

Table of stock prices including Allied Chem, American Air Lines, American Motors, etc.

Livestock

Table of livestock prices including Cattle, Hogs, Sheep, etc.

Grains

Table of grain prices including Wheat, Corn, Soybeans, etc.

Eggs

Table of egg prices including Portland, UPI - Dairy market.

LOCAL SECURITIES

Table of local security prices including Bank of America, Boise Cascade, etc.

Potatoes

Table of potato prices including Portland UPI - Potato market.

TODAY'S POTATO MARKET

Table of potato market data including Klamath Basin, IDAHO, etc.

STOP PAIN OF HEMORRHOIDS

Advertisement for hemorrhoid treatment including text and logo for BEAL & OLIVER.

Body Found in Ditch At Tulelake

TULELAKE—The body of a Tulelake woman, 45, was found about 5 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 9, floating face down in an irrigation ditch adjacent to the city limits.

According to persons who saw Mrs. Gibson earlier in the evening, she had parked her car after being in a tavern or two in Tulelake, and had left for the El Rancho Motel at Hatfield with a party of friends.

Some time early Tuesday morning, she left the group, saying she would walk home after refusing offers of a ride.

The highway makes a slight turn near the ditch which was partly filled with water, and Mrs. Gibson apparently missed the turn, fell in the dark and walked into the stream.

She had been employed by G. W. Osborne and Sons as a housekeeper for several years until the partnership was dissolved, then was employed by Fred Osborne as bookkeeper in his business. She had lived in Tulelake for 12 years.

Mrs. Gibson was born April 29, 1920, in her earlier life she was reported to have been a professional singer. An injury from a fall from a ladder was the cause of her retirement from public appearances.

An autopsy was to be conducted at the Idaho Memorial Chapel Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 10. Funeral arrangements will be announced.

Survivors include her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Gibson, Merrill; a son, Theris Brown, Ellensburg, and a sister, Essie May, Los Angeles, and four grandchildren.

Curth said he expects firm opposition to the project from Great Northern Bank, a major abutting property owner. Other property owners possess sufficient property for the petition to be filed.

The agents said Hawkins has been running a business of providing liquor to minors at his home. They said he would purchase the liquor with a "service fee" for each bottle.

Some 30 state police officers of Klamath and Lake counties were in Klamath Falls Wednesday to attend an all-day in-service training school at the Shasta Way Armory.

The annual Sweetheart Ball will be held at the Eagles Hall, Saturday, Feb. 13, with music by the Smoothies. Dancing will start at 10 p.m.

Dog owners are reminded that 5 p. m. Monday, March 1, is the last time they may purchase licenses for their pets without incurring a penalty.

Funerals will be held for Mrs. Elizabeth Gibson, 41, who died Feb. 9, 1965. Survivors include her husband, Edgar Gibson, 57, and three children.

Brush-Sha, Brush-Sha

Posters promoting Dental Health Week, Feb. 7 through 13, are being displayed in local dentist offices and in store windows all over town.

These particular posters were made last year by Mills School third grade students during Dental Health Week. Once again this year, the project is underway for 1966.

Another project, aside from that of Mills School, is a contest in the county school grades sponsored by the Klamath County Dental Auxiliary.

Richard Peters, area third grade students from Mills working on their posters, left to right, Steven Rucker, Robin Willis, Eric Dabbling and Diane Binder, all students of Mrs. Willis.

Judge Cuts Liquor Line For Minors

A 27-year-old Klamath Falls man, described by state liquor agents as "one of the major liquor sources in the area," was handed a six-month sentence Tuesday by District Judge Robert Kerr.

The court sentenced the man to four months in jail, three of which will be suspended if he Hawkins pays the fine. Hawkins pleaded guilty to making and selling liquor to minors at his home.

Conferees are scheduled in the evenings during the first week of March. Chairmen of the three survey subcommittees are John B. Bishop, recently retired manager of Weyerhaeuser, W. D. "Big" Gange, Tulelake, and the Rev. Lant W. Sibbet.

Police Attend Training Class

Some 30 state police officers of Klamath and Lake counties were in Klamath Falls Wednesday to attend an all-day in-service training school at the Shasta Way Armory.

Eagles Plan Heart Dance

The annual Sweetheart Ball will be held at the Eagles Hall, Saturday, Feb. 13, with music by the Smoothies. Dancing will start at 10 p.m.

Dog Owners Face Deadline

Dog owners are reminded that 5 p. m. Monday, March 1, is the last time they may purchase licenses for their pets without incurring a penalty.

Obituaries

Funerals will be held for Mrs. Elizabeth Gibson, 41, who died Feb. 9, 1965. Survivors include her husband, Edgar Gibson, 57, and three children.

Aerial View Reveals Devastation Caused By Christmas Week Floods

The twin-winged Cessna shot upward like a helicopter and then abruptly plunged downward in fighting the turbulent air currents. We peered out of the cockpit windows and saw the Upper Klamath Lake—1,000 feet below—as it rippled across broken dikes and levees into farm lands still submerged under the spillage of the Christmas Week floods.

On board the Pacific Power and Light Company aircraft to take note of the countryside inundated by flood were a P&L pilot, Phil G. Humphreys, of Portland office of the power company, this reporter, and Don Kettler, photographer, of the Herald news service.

Far below, near the mouth of the Williamson River, hundreds of motorist traveling along that slightly above the standing water, or in some cases, the metal blue of the ice to which much of it had been converted.

Swollen by the runoff of thousands of streams and rivers in the Klamath Basin, the waters of Upper Klamath Lake piled up at the mouth of the Williamson River—merging with it and covering vast flatlands to the south.

Southward from Modoc Point to Klamath Falls, the image of the land appeared unaltered by the flood, but from the latter portion of the lake than it had along its eastern shoreline. Levees that had once held the lake away from flourishing grasslands lay as narrow ridges above ponds surfaced with ice.

At the southeastern portion of the inundated valley rose a large hill—now a barren island—which served as a refuge for a number of cattle isolated there.

Officers said the woman called headquarters Tuesday evening and reported the loss of the car. She said she had been robbed at gunpoint and beaten by the bandit while working as temporary clerk at the Holly Hotel.

The woman was taken to headquarters while the hotel was searched and the missing $31 was found hidden near her room. She was then booked.

Cars Damaged By Collision

A three-car rearend collision at Altamont Drive near Sixth Street about 4:30 p.m. Tuesday resulted in minor damage to the vehicles, but no injuries to the motorists, Oregon State Police have reported.

The accident occurred as Lynn Fredrick, 21, of 833 California, stopped his automobile behind a long line of cars at the traffic light at South Sixth Street intersection.

Fire Report

Suburban Fire Department 3:51 p.m. Tuesday—Grass fire near OCE tracks off Summers Lane, no damage.

People Read SPOT ADS - you are now.

Advertisement for a gift of flowers including text and image of a bouquet.

Vertical text on the right edge of the page, including '10 Ce 99' and other fragments.