Senate Unit Postpones School Vote

SALEM (UPI) — The Senate Elections Committee delayed action Thursday on a bill to shift the responsibility for Oregon's community college program from the Department of Education to Higher Education.

There was no indication when it would be considered again.

A motion by Sen. Ben Musa, D-The Dalles, to send the measure to the floor was beaten 4-1, and a motion by Sen. Tom Monaghan, D-Milwaukie, to table it failed to pass by one vote.

The bill was introduced by Sen R. F. Chapman, D - Coos Bay, who told the committee he did not approve of the way the Department of Education was "selling" the community college system to the public.

"I think this (community college) is higher education and that is where it belongs," Musa agreed.

Mid-Columbia Affected

The committee also decided to give more study to bills aimed specifically at community college problems in The Dalles and Eugene, but which would have far wider implications.

The bill aimed at ending a dispute over formation of a Mid-Columbia district in north central Oregon provides that the votes of each county or portion of a county which would be included in a district would be counted separately in a boundary election. Any county which voted against inclusion would be left out.

Musa said under Oregon's present law residents of Hood River, Sherman and other counties could be forced into the Mid-Columbia district against their wishes by sheer voting weight of Wasco County.

Chairman Al Flegel, D-Roseburg, ordered the committee staff to prepare an amendment allowing the State Board of Education to reconsider the boundaries and call another election within 90 days if one part of a proposed district voted to stay out. That suggestion came from Lou Norris of the Oregon Farm Bureau Federation.

The Eugene bill would roll back a moratorium on funding of new community colleges which went into effect at the end of 1962. It is aimed specifically at getting state aid for Lane Community College at Eugene, which is scheduled to go into operation in September.

However, the provisions also would make money available to Mid-Columbia and Washington County intermediate education districts.

This view shows the equipment just arrived at Keno, brought by the Hall Hauling Company. It is expected that Pacific Power and Light will have the diversion ditch in operation within 30 days.

Architect To Present School Plan

Architect Murdo Morrison is scheduled to present preliminary plans and cost estimates for a major addition to Henley Junior High School next Thursday to county school directors.

Directors ordered the plans to be drawn for a cafeteria, four classrooms, a library, a two-room shop and a principal's office, expanding the capacity of the recently-completed Henley Junior High.

Directors also are scheduled to consider salary increases for janitors, supervisory staff, coaches, the maintenance crew and the county school office staff. They will hear a report from a lay salary committee on its findings.

The school board is expected to make a decision on the number of buses to be purchased during 1965-66. Directors already have decided to order automatic transmissions in the 1965-66 buses.

Another item on the agenda is the conversion of furnaces in several schools to gas. Directors will consider the addition of driver education to the curriculum and discuss procedures for preparation of the 1965-66 budget.

Educators Push Drive For Salary Increases

SALEM (UPI)—Higher education brought its highest-ranking officers into the campaign for salary increases Thursday.

Spokesmen for the state board, individual schools and teachers presented graphic illustrations of their problems to members of the ways and means salary subcommittee.

Charles Holloway, president of the State Board of Higher Education, told lawmakers there was no general exodus of college teachers after the 1963 tax referendum, but he said this was due in part to the "faith of the faculties that the State Board of Higher Education would request additional salaries" this year.

He said he couldn't predict the consequences if the increases did not occur.

Chancellor Roy Lieualen said the pressures for salary increases and fringe benefits were greater than at any time since he joined the state system in 1957.

Some of the most vivid examples came from Portland State College President Branford Millar and associate Dean Charles Holman of the University of Oregon Medical School.

Millar said schools looking for teachers were "subject to the conditions of the market place, and the market has been going up."

He told of losing two assistant professors to Michigan State University at raises of $3,000 and $2,500 per year; of losing an assistant professor of sociology who was making $6,700 to the University of Alberta, where he received $8,825; of a biology teacher making $8,800 who had an offer of $12,000 from the University of New Mexico, and half a dozen similar cases.

"Not everybody considers the fishing in the magnificent countryside of Oregon a substitute for salaries," Millar said.

Dr. Holman told of a different problem.

The Medical School Hospital pays its interns $175 a month and its resident trainees $200 to $250. He said there was a concerted effort across the country to raise the traditionally - low stipends of these young doctors, and said his school was falling farther behind.

"Our purpose is not to be competitive," he said. "We're just trying to pay enough so the boys can live without going deeper in debt."

Budgeteers Okay Raise To Teachers

The Klamath Union High School District Budget Committee Thursday night took care of the largest single item in the 1965-66 budget—instruction.

Included in the instructional total was a $667,843 figure for teachers' salaries, incorporating an across - the - board raise requested by the teachers.

Thursday night's work left only two major high school budget items to be considered — administration and fixed charges.

The next high school budget committee meeting is set for Feb. 16.

The next elementary school budget committee meeting will be Feb. 17.

It is planned that the final hearing on the high school budget prior to its submission to voters will be April 5 and the final hearing on the elementary school budget, March 29.

The high school salary increase was incorporated into the proposed budget. A similar salary increase was added to the proposed elementary school budget.

Man Jailed As Suspect

A Sprague River man sought by local law enforcement officers in connection with a pickup truck that was reported missing from the Sprague River Ranch last Monday was apprehended by city police Thursday afternoon and has been lodged in the Klamath County Jail.

Apprehended on a charge of taking and using a vehicle without the permission of the owner was Fred Ernest Fox, 51, Box 395, who is in custody of the sheriff in lieu of $500 bail.

City police officers said the truck was observed proceeding through the city about 2:45 p.m. Thursday and later was traced to the park and shop parking lot at South Eighth Street and Klamath Avenue. An officer was stationed in a patrol car nearby to take Fox into custody when he returned for the truck.

At 6 p.m. Fox approached the officer to ask about motel accommodations in the area and was arrested on the felony charge.

The truck is the property of Douglas Hess, who had employed Fox at the ranch.

Legislators Study 3 Touchy Bills On School Districts, Wage Floors

SALEM (UPI)—Three bills on the sensitive subjects of schools and minimum wages caused a flurry of comment when they were introduced in the legislature late Thursday.

Sen. Al Flegel, D-Roseburg, introduced a measure which would reward school districts which unify under the 1957 reorganization law. Those districts would get 25 per cent more money from the state basic school support fund than those who refuse to conform.

Flegel introduced the bill two days after his Senate Education Committee heard intense opposition to a bill which would force elementary school districts to merge with union high school districts.

The other education bill would freeze flat grants to districts from basic school support at their present level and provide that any future increase would be used to equalize educational opportunity and school taxes among districts.

That measure was introduced in the House by Rep. Betty Roberts, D - Portland. Her bill is directly opposed to a Portland School Board plan, which calls for freezing the amount of equalization money and increasing the flat grants.

Twenty Democrats in the House and 10 in the Senate put in a bill calling for a state minimum wage of $1.25 an hour with time and a half after 40 hours per week.

The United Labor Lobby introduced a bill calling for a $1.25 minimum wage earlier. The Democrats said it was "pigeon-holed" in the Senate State and Federal Affairs Committee.

Other Highlights

Education—The House Education Committee approved, with several amendments, the 264-page recodification of the state's education law. It was sent to the floor along with a Senate-passed bill requiring community colleges to use those words in their names.

Annual Sessions—The Senate State and Federal Affairs Committee tabled one bill calling for annual legislative sessions and deferred action on another "until the proposed new state constitution is considered."

College Building—A Ways and Means subcommittee reluctantly guaranteed that it would approve at least $8 million for college construction in the next two years. The state system of higher education asked for the assurance so that it could apply for about $1 million in federal matching money.

Tax: The House Tax Committee introduced a bill which would assess a one per cent net income tax on all business firms. The money would be used to offset a portion of the present business inventory tax. Several proposals to repeal the inventory tax are before the legislature.

Motorbikes— The House Natural Resources Committee heard arguments on both sides of a bill which would allow the state to control use of motorbikes and other motor vehicles on federal land.

Race Rider Draws Study

SALEM (UPI) — The Ways and Means Committee today sent back to a subcommittee for further study a $2.2 million budget for the Racing Commission after a dispute over a controversial rider.

Rep. Ross Morgan, D-Gresham, attempted to have the rider removed and the budget sent to the House floor.

The subcommittee Thursday amended the budget to force racetrack operators to turn over unclaimed winnings to the state. Operators have been keeping the winnings.

"This is the most devious thing I've seen since I've been on Ways and Means, and I've pulled a few myself," charged Morgan. He said dog and horse track operators are engaged in a legitimate business and are forced to pay higher taxes than in almost any other state in the nation.

He demanded that the operators be given a chance to be heard.

Rep. C. R. Hoyt, R-Corvallis, who sponsored the amendment, estimated unclaimed winnings would total about $60,000 a biennium.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Johnson today announced a State Department reshuffle in which Averell Harriman will become a roving ambassador. Thomas C. Mann will succeed Harriman as the department's third-ranking official.

The White House said Mann, now assistant secretary for InterAmerican affairs and coordinator of the Alliance for Progress, would be nominated as undersecretary for economic affairs.

The President picked Jack Hood Vaughn, now the ambassador to Panama to succeed Mann.

School Support—Latest reports from school districts indicate the drain on the state's general fund for basic school support may be from $500,000 to $1.5 million less than anticipated earlier, Finance and Administration Director Freeman Holmer told a Ways and Means subcommittee.
