

Sadistic Boss Requires Help Of Psychiatrist

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Please don't bury me. Answer me. What can be done about a foreman who is a sadist? I take his piece by the neck of the neck and I bare their faults for all to see. He never criticizes a person privately. He must have an audience—and the larger the better.

What makes a man want to strip other men of all dignity? Why must he embarrass and humiliate them before their fellow workers? At present he is picking on a young man who is handicapped because he is conscientious and eager to do well. He tries harder than anyone in the shop because he is determined that his output be as great, and the quality of his work as good, as the others. This foreman is not so poor as he is hearingbacking.

I have a hunch the foreman needs a few sessions on the couch. Would you care to comment—OBSERVER OF MANS INHUMANITY TO MAN? Dear Observer: Your hunch is my hunch. Sadistic and brutal behavior is a sign of a disturbed personality. People who mock and humiliate others are basically very unhappy with themselves.

The foreman may have serious doubts about his own masculinity and is fearful that others may have doubts, too. This could prompt him to behave in an overly aggressive way. The couch could be helpful, but first the foreman has to accept the fact that he needs help.

Dear Ann Landers: I read with interest your letter about the "Pig Party" dreamed up by a fraternity in Long Island college. This example of cruelty is not exclusively a fraternity stunt. We had something similar in the Midwest. It was called the "Pig Pool."

Several times a year there were mass social horrors laughingly referred to as "Mixers." These get-togethers were arranged between the men's and women's dorms for the purpose of helping students get acquainted. The female dorm at which I lived took collections. The proceeds were given out as consolation prizes to the man in the dorm who got stuck with the ugliest girl.

A good friend of mine who won the pool during his senior year tried the "prize pig" two years later. That was in 1955. Today they have beautiful children and are blissfully happy. The campus beauty who was homecoming queen was divorced and is currently embroiled in a scandal involving embezzlement and adultery. So maybe they should give those "consolation" prizes to the guy who gets the prettiest girl.—CRITIC

Club Names New Chiefs

CHEMULU—The Chemulm Gun Club during its annual business meeting elected officers for the coming season. Elected were David Metz as president; Jack Grevell, vice president; Harold York, secretary-treasurer; and Jim Kranz and Lee Smith, field captains.

The next six Sunday shoots will begin at 11 a.m. for the Journal Telegraph shoots with a seventh Sunday the one make-up shoot allowed. There will be at least 18 trophies that will be awarded at the close of the series of shoots and will be presented at a dinner at the Midway Cafe. Dues are a minimum and new members or guest shooters are encouraged.

After the Journal shoots are completed the club will go on the regular schedule of the first and third Sundays with the traps opening at 1 p.m. and remain open as long as members want to shoot. There will be several night shoots that will be announced later by the officers, and there will be many merchandise shoots scheduled during the summer months until late fall.

Pleiku Victims Relate Tales Of Sneak Attack

By United Press International

The Johnnies came home from war. The Jones, the Howards, the Davids, and the Carls were home. They were home. They were marching home. They were carried on litters and in coffins. The wounded victims of the Pleiku sneak attack last Saturday, their broken bodies strapped to blanket-covered litters, were flown home Thursday from Viet Nam. More will follow. So, too, will come the victims of Qui Nhon and only the Almighty knows how many more such blood-bathing before the Southeast Asian jungle war ends.

The big Air Force transport planes which flew into Travis Air Force base in California, Monday, were loaded with New Jersey and Andrews in Washington, D.C., carried the victims of the sneak attack. The kind of war ever devised. They were victims of feroceous, night-stalking Viet Cong tactics, who strike without warning, kill and maim and then disappear into the countryside, perhaps to be seen in the morning's light as farmers or houseboat night. The seven wounded veterans of Pleiku who arrived at McGuire was Pfc. David L. Mazurek, 25, of Wabers, Pa. He was asleep in his hut when the mortar shells began to fall. "I woke up and ran out the door of the hut and hit the dirt," he said. "I was wounded in my leg."

Harold J. Feldman Jr., 19, of Oxford, Mich., who had been rotated home next day after 11 months in Viet Nam, also was caught in the hut by the surprise Viet Cong attack at Pleiku which killed eight Americans and wounded 109. He received shrapnel wounds of the leg.

Others flown to McGuire, and later to the Valley Forge Army Hospital at Phoenixville, Pa., were 1st Lt. Joseph W. Rigby, 25, of Rockey, Tex.; CWO William P. Boynton, 30, of Leducard, Pa.; Sp4 Leonard J. Labiak, 20, Chicago; Pfc. Leonard E. Bane, 20, of Marion, Pa.; and Pvt. Joseph J. Hughes of Brooklyn, N.Y.

None were hit by shot and shell inside their hiltles. Lt. Rigby, an exception, caught a bullet in the side while serving guard duty at a Viet Cong camp ambushed by the Viet Cong east of Pleiku. His wife and two children live in South Amboy, N.J.

Barone, perhaps typical of many of the returning wounded, preferred not to talk about his flirtation with death. Flown to Travis, near San Antonio, Texas.

Schools Join Music Festival

WEED—Thirteen elementary schools including Dunsmuir, McCool, Mount Shasta, Weed, Yreka, Zina, Fort Jones, Grenada, Montague, Hornbrook, Hill, Dorris and Tulelake participated in an Honor Band and Chorus Day held at the Weed High School on Saturday, Feb. 13.

The combined music groups started a full scheduled day with 10 a.m. rehearsals. Afternoon rehearsals were held followed by a recreation period, and lunch and dinner were served in the school cafeteria. A concert starting at 8 p.m. was given in the evening with special conductors Dr. Ferral, Madson, band, and Ralph Wads-worth, chorus. Both men are from the Chico State Music Department faculty.
