nine different lines of bidding. They were allowed to play the slam at eight tables and every one made it without any trouble. At most tables South opened a diamond. Declarer would rise with dummy's ace and discard one of his clubs. Then he would lead a club toward his own hand. North would take the ace and lead a trump but it would be the ace of hearts. East would still be able to ruff two clubs in dummy.

The slam would still make with a trump lead but it would require a successful spade defense since after taking his ace of clubs North would lead a second heart.

One North-South pair refused to settle for letting their opponents play six hearts. Somehow or other North decided that six hearts and that a save was indicated. Hence he bid six hearts. This was a most unusual "unusual" no-trump and clearly South to bid his better minor suit. Therefore, South ignored his seven card spade suit and dutifully bid seven clubs.

West doubled and opened his singleton club and when the smoke cleared away South had managed to gather in only two tricks and East and West gathered in 3200 points instead of the mere 1430 that a slam would have brought them while North and South undoubtedly came close to establishing a record for being set in 1964.
