CAVALCADE of PROGRESS

Education Section E

Oregon Technical Institute offers training and education for the future in its multi-million-dollar campus in Klamath Falls. The new campus was opened last fall to an enrollment of more than 1,000 students — a new record. Oregon Tech offers courses ranging from medical technology to gunsmithing. It trains persons to step into the rapidly-expanding technical fields which have become major parts of the modern American economy. One of the most complex and important of these fields is electronics. Here, Dennis Nitschke of Billings, Mont., (left) and Floyd Mays of Maupin work with two pieces of electronics equipment in the Oregon Tech electronics laboratory.
