When most bridge players go into an apparent trance they are likely to be thinking of almost anything. When an expert goes into a trance you can be sure that he is thinking about something connected with the hand he is playing.

Ira Rubin of Fairlawn, N.J., opened his eight of spades against the four-heart contract. The four was played from dummy and when East played the jack and South the ace ira noted that South was marked with the nine of spades for a diamond and would have made his contract.

South played to dummy's ace of hearts and continued the suit. East discarded his deuce of spades and ira won the trick with the king. Then came the trump lead which led to the deuce of diamonds.

South finessed dummy's queen successfully but had no way to get back to his hand to draw ira's remaining trumps and wound up going down one.

Had ira led a club, South would have allowed South to draw trumps and play the nine of spades. Eventually,
